Next I moved on to things that are more specific but based on probabilities. I asked sitters to write their date of birth on the astrological chart, so I knew their year of birth. I had previously looked up the most common names for babies in each decade. For the United States, these are:

• 1960s: Lisa, Mary, Susan, Michael, David, John

• 1970s: Jennifer, Amy, Melissa, Michael, Christopher, Jason

• 1980s: Jessica, Jennifer, Amanda, Michael, Christopher, Matthew

• 1990s: Jessica, Ashley, Jennifer, Michael, Christopher, Matthew

Assuming that most people know more people of the same age and gender, I picked a name of the same gender of the sitter with their birth year decade. Then, I made roughly the following statement:

“I get a strong sense of someone significant in your life. It’s not quite clear, but I see a name starting with a J. It’s someone you know well but haven’t been in touch with for a while. I know you’ve interacted on social occasions. You haven’t been in touch for a while but have thought about reaching out. I see a Jess, or Jessica, or similar. Tell me what relationship this person has to you.”

This worked pretty well with people who were Maybes and Believers. However, I ran into issues with two Skeptics who also grew up outside the United States so my most common names did not apply to their social circles.

One rule with psychic readings is that a fortune teller can never be wrong. For people who adamantly said that there was no Jess or Jessica in their life, I simply did a time shift:

“I get the strong sense that this Jessica has a very important, positive influence on your life. If this person hasn’t come along yet, please look out for her in the future to make sure that you don’t miss her.”

Accidents Involving Water

I took a leap of faith on one cold reading method that suggested that most people have had an accident in their childhood involving water. This sounded oddly specific to me but I tried it out. Here is roughly how I phrased it:

“It’s not quite clear to me, but I see something, probably in your childhood, an accident involving water. What does this mean to you?”

Not expecting much at all, I got a hit about 50% of the time. The first answer I got from a sitter, who turned pale after my statement, was unbelievable and actually sent chills down my spine, to the point that I was not comfortable digging deeper:

“Actually, there was something. During my childhood, one family had a child that drowned in the pool. They took me in to live with them after that.”

Others were less dramatic but still interesting:

“When I was 2, I fell into a river and almost drowned.”

“I was on a row boat with my mother once and fell overboard. I had a life preserver on, and my mother pulled me in straight away. I swallowed a lot of water and got quite scared.”

If people insisted that there was no accident involving water, I first tried to broaden (bath tub, slipped on ice) and then pivoted:

“You were very young, so it’s possible that you don’t remember. Make sure to ask your parents about this accident.”

A House with the Digit 2 in the Street Number

One would think that the chance to have the digit 2 in the street number is about one in ten, but it’s actually much more likely. Many streets are short and don’t go much higher than the 30s. If you phrase it vaguely enough, you can expand the search to any house of significance, including the childhood home, current residence, or a friend’s place. Again, I got a hit in about 50% or more of cases with a statement like this one:

“I’m seeing a house. It’s not quite clear to me, but I see the digit 2. Does that mean anything to you? It may be your current residence or where you grew up, or another place of significance.”

Press enter or click to view image in full size

When I had a hit, I sometimes expanded with general statements. For example, for a childhood home, I said to one sitter:

“I get the sense that there was some problems with friends or relatives.”

That was spot on — her parents were going through a divorce during this time. If talking about the current home, I may use another general statement:

“I get the sense that somewhere in your home there is a box containing items related to an unusual hobby that you once pursued but that now lays dormant.”

Most people have had a hobby that they no longer pursue, and most people have trouble throwing stuff out that is of sentimental value to them.

Where I Drew the Line

I made sure to draw the line with items that would emotionally hurt people. For example, I never made negative statements about health (e.g., “I see someone close to you who had pain in their chest or abdomen.”) because this could quickly turn into an emotional situation that would be a goldmine for a less scrupulous psychic to exploit but that I feared may hurt people.

Similarly, I did not claim to channel the dead. When I heard about the kid who drowned in the pool, other psychics may have said “This child wants you to know that really appreciate that you came into the family and took their place because it made their mum and dad very happy.” One sitter had lost someone close to them and was actually seeing a medium to talk to them, so I stayed far away from that topic for the same reason.

Psychic Survey: Net Promoter Score of 62.5
After the reading was completed, I asked people to fill in a short survey to tell me how I'd done. First, I started out with a Net Promoter Score, which is a standard measure of how a company is doing. I probably had the bonus of people wanting to be nice, and they received the service for free, but I still got a very respectable score of 62.5, which is good even for a free service.

Press enter or click to view image in full size

I also asked for some free text feedback, and here is what I received, from raving endorsers to skeptics:

"All of his observations were correct. It was as though we spend a lot of time together — the personality points were really spot on, the intuitive thoughts on career and the box of unpacked things in my house were totally right."
"Probably the most surprising thing was reminding me of a time in my childhood when I fell out of a boat and swallowed some water. Scary at the time but no long-term consequences."
"Chris is excellent at letting his observations flow, has a knack for understanding where there needs to be emphasis and provides a positive way to view areas of your life that may need a little bit of a boost. It's uncanny how he can see the details and how on point he is."
"It was pretty interesting. It seemed like some of the information he was trying to reach was a bit vague and maybe difficult for him but perhaps with more practice it will become easier and clearer."
In another question, I gave people a slider for how often I was right vs. wrong, with 100% being fully correct. Only one person gave me less than 50%, meaning I was more right than wrong in an overwhelming amount of cases:

Give Cold Reading a Try
I'm not an expert in cold reading — all I did was read a book and prepare for my psychic sessions. You don't have to give full psychic readings to start with this: simply apply some of the techniques in everyday conversation. What a great read! I very much enjoyed. I came to your article while searching how to learn cold readings like Patrick Jane from the Mentalist.

Since you've written it, have you continued and cold read strangers you've come across?

Well the first thing to know, is that the influx of DM's you're going to get after posting this should probably be ignored. As a sub we recommend not replying to any unsolicited reading offers, as this is how a lot of scammers on the spirituality subs work. No good reader has to reach out for business.

Unfortunately the only way to find the right reader for you is by trial and error. Reviews can be faked, a reader who connects superbly with your best friend may not be able to read you, and cost has no bearing on a readers skills.

Unfortunately scammers are more & more common, you just have to browse this sub and the scammer subs to see it's becoming more & more popular. Just keep your wits about you and think about what you're doing. Think how much information you're giving someone (irl or online) and if you're asked to pay for anything above and beyond your pre-arranged reading fee, walk away. Any upselling of candles, crystals, rocks, spells or cleansing, walk away.

And don't be afraid to speak up if your reading doesn't resonate with you. No reader is 100% accurate 100% of the time - about 75% is good, but remember your reading is only advice. No reading comes with assurances or guarantees. And yes, we can get things wrong! But if you're 10 minutes on and NOTHING is making sense, stop your reader and tell them! A good one wants to know so they can refocus and correct their mistakes, or reschedule if for some reason they aren't connecting with you. Don't wait until the end to say it was rubbish, that just smacks of not wanting to pay.

Finally, we don’t allow recommendations, reviews, promotion or advertising on this sub, but we do have a readers request and offer thread, which is exactly as it sounds! And we all readings offered through this sub must be completely free of charge, we don’t even allow our readers here to ask for donations, and you’re free to request from as many readers as you’d like as often as you’d like!

Good luck and enjoy

Well done. You said it all. I am a professional psychic (I am in no way soliciting). I just want to use that to say as someone who is both a client and a reader. There is an over saturation of illegitimate liars and thieves. So many of them ready to take your money. I would mostly stay offline for these services. It's too hard to trust. Myself has looked into brick and mortar stores. Where the psycic has cared enough to actually set up a phsycial business. You can go in, meet them, feel out their vibe, and schedule (if you like). I have walked in, and quickly out before. I think meeting the person face to face validates the service you should want to expect.

Thank you for your info. I've never had a reading, so I've actually been apprehensive about storefront psychics concerned about scamming. I realize scammers are everywhere though. So, how would you suggest someone scope out a psychic storefront to determine if you vibe with the reader? Is it OK to walk in and say your looking for a psychic you feel you have a connection with before scheduling a reading? And is it OK to just walk in without an appointment?

I'd heard about psychic fairs and wondered if that's a good way to find a psychic you like. I've never been to one, so is that too much energy in one place to get a good reading?

Obviously, I'm not a reader, so that might be an ignorant question. 😁 Some of the kids on 'Psychic Kids' mention being overwhelmed with many spirits reaching out to them, so it seemed plausible.

Thanks to everyone here for all the helpful suggestions!

Same ways you can make a decision to work with any trusted professional: referrals, research and intuition.

1) Ask anyone you feel comfortable with asking for recommendations for who they used 2) Do some due diligence: dig around, interview possible service providers and ask questions about their education, experience and approach 3) As you do 2/3, trust your vibes and let your own intuition lead you

That's what's helped me.

It depends on what you are looking for and what kind of reading you want. If you want an in person psychic you can always talk with them first before booking something and see if you like their energy. It may be harder with online ones, but often they have a website or social media account of some form you can look through and get a feel for their overall vibe and style.

You can always look at reviews if they have them but I usually take them with a grain of salt. If you find one you like, and they are in your price range, I think the only way to really know is to try them out. I am somewhat wary of those who charge extremely high or extremely low prices though.

Are you in touch with your guides? If not, start there for best results. They have probably been sending you 11:11s or feathers to catch your attention. When you are ready to see, they will bring you more and more info. Mine brought me EVERY teacher I needed to move along. Be prepared to do your own homework.

Your biggest job at this moment, based on you describing this being a life question, is to observe. Your team knows you are seeking answers. I am telling you, they will show answers to you using symbolism and synchronicities that make sense to you.

If you need a teacher or a medium, one will come to you and you will feel the connection. This will require self control and patience not to over anticipate like I did! 😂

I honestly don't even know how to start to get in touch with my guides. I've seen angel numbers everywhere most of the days. Yesterday for example I saw 10:10 on the 10th of November. I'm observing, or maybe better to say analyzing, if not over analyzing. But I just can't seem to connect the dots unfortunately.

Your guides have likely been leaving you messages waiting for you to notice them! Usually communications begin with synchronicities. They use symbols and visuals to get your attention for most until you work out clear communication. What that means will be different for everyone although many of us share similar experiences.

I talk to mine about the questions I have, I ask for insight. Meditate before bed. And listen as you are waking up. Those twilight moments before consciousness are when you will receive messages. Write them down right away before memory fades.

These are ways I have used myself. I’m sure others will have ideas as well.

I guess you have your answer already - but it's practically impossible for us to guarantee that you'll find a psychic in your immediate area, not knowing the area, etc. Also wanted to say, you have a psychic within you - perhaps you should think about trying to access Divine guidance in your daily life. All humans have that potential.

There's no absolute good psychic and no absolute bad psychic.. it's the relationship between the one person who reads and the object or subject of the reading that has to be good/easy so it really depends on what you need "a good psychic" for I think.

Still, maybe it's going to be useful to keep in mind that involving a third party in whatever communication means involving one more perspective that can be a very good "channel" or "mediator" but remains a singular human with its own experience, perceptive asset, limits and so on.

Not the answer you were looking for maybe, hope it still serves to a degree.

Over 7GB of Freemasonry E-Books
I mentioned in another thread that I have over 7GB of Freemasonry e-books. I couldn't remember where I got them from, but I did a search over on the Pirate Bay and I'm pretty sure I found the torrent. It contains over 700 e-books, as well as images, periodicals, and a Masonic font (which is just the Masonic Cypher). AFAIK everything is in the Public Domain (so it should be legal), but I could be wrong; some of the books mentioned are also available via other links that someone else provided in another thread for free Masonic e-books. I've provided the link should any be interested in downloading the torrent. Clicking the link will only take you to the page, and will not start a download or anything. I hope y'all enjoy it.

I'm cleaning up file names a bit. The book themselves were split across two folders, and were all in upper case. There were underscores in the places of spaces. Some had an underscore in the place of a letter. I'm also going to move "The" to the end of titles so you properly alphabetize them.

The image folders I'm not sure what to do with. Many of the images just have a number and no name and I don't recognize them all. Some of the images don't appear to be masonic (they're just orders of knights or symbols of nations).

I might upload the collection to my Google Drive and share it where people can see it and more easily grab a single file rather than a .RAR file that is nearly 8 GB for the whole collection.

If someone can help me clean up the images, that would be great.

There seem to be some decent things in there. Then there are a few silly things such as:

BACONS_SECRET_DISCLOSED_-_G_CUNNINGHAM.pdf

I'm thinking of cleaning the collection up and putting it into a Google Drive share where people can more easily browse the files and download what they want (or easily check out the whole folder).

At a glance that book appears silly, but I'm not sure I want to delete it entirely simply because I prefer to preserve things. I'm thinking of creating a sub-folder for "Not Necessarily Masonic" books and move some into there.

If you have suggestions for other "chaff" that I should separate, please let me know.

Indeed, have to separate the wheat from the chaff in some of these.

Could you post a list of the works? As a general rule, you can only be sure about works (published in the US) prior to 1923, though many published before 1964 are also PD.

If you go to the link, it looks like the contents are listed. Not sure if that's 700 or not....

Thanks!

I don't know all the books (not even near), but nothing jumps out as probably non-PD.

From memory most things are prior to 1923. I don't recall seeing anything after that.

Only 150 of the book titles are listed in the PirateBay description. Here is a full list of the 700+ books and 4500+ images with a full file listing.

I haven't checked the link yet, but I need to ask: Are these public domain books, or are these pirated? We really can't post the links to dumps of books that are illegally obtained.

From what I can tell these are public domain. Many seem to have been scanned into Google for their preservation thing.

Hey bro bros. I see a lot of Masonic apparel online. Never thought anything of it until I met a guy from my lodge that wears Masonic…. Everything… every day. Is it common to draw attention to being a Mason outside of the lodge. I'm an EA and am not wearing the S&C yet. But is it common in the 3°?

Looking for occult fiction audio books / torrent. Have a long drive ahead of me.
I already know about the many podcasts and Manly Hall audios. Looking for fiction suggestions. Wish something like John Constantine was an audio book. Thanks

I wonder if Foucault's Pendulum is available as an audio book? I wouldn't be surprised.

Am I allowed to mention theaudiobookbay? I found Foucault's Pendulum on there about a year ago.

Would the Dresden books be a good recommendation? Not as dark as Constantine but kind of similar.

Stephen King has a bit of a bad reputation because if his mainstream praise. I think a lot of his work is fucking amazing when you are tapped in to this information. I recommend dream catcher. Easily my absolute favorite. If you know nothing about it, good. Keep it that way. Go in as blind as possible.

Insomnia is a little more mellow and "spiritual" and it sucked me right in despite me thinking I wouldn't be able to relate to any of the characters.

Don't be fooled by the fact that old housewives and kids love his books, there's absolutely deeper stuff going on in almost all of them.

Probably not what you're looking for but I'm listening to VALIS by Philip K Dick currently. Goes deep into gnostic philosophy and it's like a psychological SciFi about Maya and reality.

Sites for books?
Hey everyone! I have been desperately trying to find sites to read witch books free or without any additional financial burden but luck isn’t by my side. Does anyone know any websites, links or books that are completely free? (If the urls are restricted from being published in public please text them to me, I would really appreciate it)

I second your local public library might surprisingly have a good amount of magic books. Also places like https://www.sacred-texts.com/ or https://hermetic.com/index. Alternatively, you might be able to to find PDF copies of a lot of books if you search for [book name] pdf.

This is where I get free books. I just searched on Cunningham, Buckland, Cabot and Gardner and found a shit load of books. Also just type in "witchcraft" or "wicca." You'll find a lot! https://z-lib.org/

Yes, or anything with “magick” in the title. (With a k!) also a website called PDF drive is pretty good. And if you’re looking to cough “borrow” things, in general, use the search engine Yandex, because better results will come up, I’ve found.

Your local public library. Many these days also have free apps for your phone, tablet, and laptop that let you borrow ebooks and audiobooks for free.

And many libraries will do an "inter-library loan" to bring in specific books they don't have in their own collection if you request them.

Talk to your local librarians as they are often very happy to help you!

The Llewellyn publishers site has free articles. And they had a browse pages of their books, bit more sample pages than Amazon. Site also has free tarot readings and a spell-a-day.

Twilight Grotto www.esotericarchives.com

There used to be a occult magick forum with dark brown pages had a big online library with free reading access but think they closed it.

Tarot forum closed but their archives still have access for reading online www.tarotforum.net

Sacred-texts.com click per subject sidebar, each opens and sometmes there are interesting texts to read even if the subject is not your main interest.

Google books. Sample pages Amazon.

Random online searches sometimes bring up texts or bits of book texts. Libraries.

Amazon has a bunch, they change and rotate as authors make them free then not free. The kindle app can be downloaded on almost any device.

You can search torrent trackers for "occult library" and there's a 450gb torrent rip of that occult ebook hard drive being sold.

I'm not one of the original members of the founding group, but I was a member on their forum over a few years ago. You are right, the forum is still technically online, but noone is allowed to post except admin(s). Private messaging still works, I am communicating with a longtime member, who says he will seed all the official Digimob torrents on request. In the meantime, you can find links to all their official torrents on Pirate Bay. I found 47 there. I do remember that the release index on their website listed about 50ish, but that index has been down for several years and the torrent files are no longer available.

However, I have finished 47 of the 49 torrents, and have been seeding them for almost a month. It has taken seemingly forever to get them. The only 2 that aren't finished are:

(digimob) Occult Mob's Submissions Digest #26.1 (98.01% finished, but taking FOREVER)

If anyone can help me finish these last 2 then PLEASE seed, thanks!

Feel free to leech from me if you want, I am online about 4 to 8 hours on most days, depending on my schedule.

I sent you a private message a few weeks ago, no answer, it's cool though.

Ebook Piracy and Wicca
What are your thoughts about this?

I feel that this has been a big problem, and many authors have lost so many sales because of the people who decided to not buy any books, but instead, torrent them.

For example:

https://drive.google.com/file/d/0B835MeLjESycZDl6YWZzZ0REbHc/view

I have no idea how to report the thousands of books I have found online for the Occult, Wicca, Witchcraft, and other forms of Paganism out there. Any ideas, like the link I posted?

I think it's a delicate situation. There isn't really a way to determine just how much the authors are actually losing out on, but it's probably not that much. However I think having them available might do more good than bad in this instance. A lot of young people can't have physical books around because of their families. And of course some people might not be able to afford them. Many libraries in smaller towns don't carry these types of books. It's also mostly older books that are torrented, so the authors have made about all they will from them anyway :/ Normally I'm against torrenting but this is just a weird situation.

I don't think there is really anywhere you can report them though. The government knows about big torrent sites already and file sharing on a smaller scale just isn't a priority.

There's an old saying that people don't value what they haven't paid for (either with money or with effort of some kind). Most people I know who have torrented occult books don't even read them.
I don't torrent myself because I don't want the malware which often accompanies torrent downloads. Can be very nasty indeed.
Also note that there are vast numbers of old texts online which are out of copyright - these are not the problem. It's only the modern texts for which pirating is an issue.

I don't acquire illegal downloads of books. To do so is like stealing from the author. Would you want to work for free? Do you know how many hours and how much money goes into making a book? It's disrespectful to the author.

[deleted]
I don't consider it piracy. Torrents are a distribution method. If publishers want to they can spend money to manage the distribution method (and find a suitable price-point), or they continue spending money on "fighting" it (basically trying to put the genie back in the bottle).

I think authors (and to a smaller extent publishers) have a right to money for their work, and they can recoup that cost in through high-quality "hardcopy" editions, autographed editions, t-shirts, posters, etc.

Like others have said, it behooves people to go out and purchase a "hardcopy" of a book if they've enjoyed reading an eBook they downloaded. That way the author gets paid and will hopefully write another book.

First. Scott Cunningham isn't losing anything because he is dead.

Second: When copyright laws were established the protection of original material lasted only for 13 years or so depending on location. The point of copyright law is to encourage the production of new works by allowing the creator to make a profit. That time limit was changed over time because BIG CORPORATIONS (Disney, etc.) bought Congressmen to keep making profits from Mickey Mouse and other properties rather than to make new works. It now prevents production of new works because creators no longer need to make anything new to make profits. I disagree with the gross extensions of copyright law to protect Corporate profits.

Third: Perhaps I'm old fashioned but I don't enjoy reading the on-line versions. I use them when I want to do a search such as finding out how many times Gardner mentioned "Wicca" in his books. Computers are really good at word matching searches.

Fourth: When I find an on-line edition that is interesting I'll buy a used hard copy. The big corporations hate that too. They don't want you to own a copy. The copy you buy can be read by two people, passed to another person, or sold used for a reduced price. They want you to pay for a "licenses to read." With computer copies they can control what you do with your copy until hackers make another copy.

Fifth: Having the on-line version allows me to read part of the book to see if I want a hard copy to read and for my own library. Even Amazon allows us to read a portion of new books before deciding to purchase.

In Summary, I support copyright laws that protect authors for the first 15 years or so, but not perpetual protection. I enjoy looking at books before purchase but I'm not going to read the whole thing. I also don't buy new copies of older books because used copies are just as good. There comes a time when older books should be public domain.

I was having a really hard time trying to figure out exactly where I sit on this issue, and then I read your response and realized that I agree 100%. Buying a used copy of a book, or borrowing a friend's, or having one "regifted", or checking one out from the library also do not do anything for the author or for the publisher.

I think the word "piracy" is a pretty intense word. I can check a book out from the library and make copies of pages I want to keep, or copy out a passage into my journal, and then share that with other people. Is that piracy? I'm not sure of the legal definition of such an act, but I'm sure they would try to find a way to get me in trouble for that.

I, like u/greybeard45, will check a book out first in a "free" way to see if I want to purchase it. If I do, then I will purchase it from one of my local, independently-run bookstores or metaphysical stores if I possibly can. If my local bookstore or metaphysical store doesn't carry it, I will ask them to order a copy for me so I can purchase it from them.

In my opinion, supporting local or niche businesses is way more important that supporting giant corporations like Amazon or Barnes & Noble, and it is my primary reason for buying books at all (other than the obvious "I want to read books" reason). And regardless of whether I buy it from Amazon or my local bookstore, the publisher is still getting their cut, and the author (or the author's estate) is still getting theirs. If I buy it from a used bookstore, well...tough shit for the publishers and authors.

I have a general dislike of torrent services, which is really more personal than ethical. Put simply, I don't want to get in trouble with my ISP if they find out I'm torrenting.

In my opinion, the advancements of technology are harming the industry - when you buy a "license to read", as mentioned above, that harms the industry in an indirect way, because people will be more inclined to find "free" or pirated copies of the book rather than pay for a specific, non-sharable copy of the book.

ALL OF THAT BEING SAID, I generally support anti-piracy laws. When people pirate small, independent movies, it makes it impossible for such movies to be made. When people pirate huge summer blockbusters, the studios don't give a crap because they're still going to make money hand over fist. Same with music - torrent the music, and the artist's progress is stunted. Buy the music, and the artist gets to keep making music.

Books are a little more complicated.

this is a very complicated issue in my mind. i feel as if it is our responsibility as a community to pay them back, HOWEVER, as a religion, the ease of access to materials is what will bring more people in and allow for the exchange of knowledge which we should be striving for.

it is rare that the bible is pirated because theyre everywhere you look. its also the dominant religion, at least in the US.

The Bible is public domain. There is no copyright held on it, and no author or author's estate to profit from its sales. You can download copies of the Bible until the cows come home and it's perfectly legal. Very much a different thing than pirating a book published in 2008 by an author who relies on its sales for their paycheck, which is what people take issue with.

samata_the_heard
Mmm, I'm not sure about that. I think certain translations of the Bible ARE copyrighted. The King James version is public domain, as are a few others. But if you're looking for one of those newfangled Bibles with a fresh, modern translation and a bunch of footnotes and expository text in it, you're going to pay for it.

There is a big difference between a "new" book published in 2008 and an old book published in 1988. Copyright laws should protect new books and other new works, but not older works. Christian book stores still make a decent profit on their bibles.

It's almost moot. Books are only a resource--they can't teach you jack. Only experience does that, and personal practice, and books can't provide that.

Beyond that, most authors losing out on $$ are published by Llewellyn anyway, which pays them very little and treats them like dirt. Frankly, we need a better publisher to dominate the scene.

11y ago
Can you elaborate on Llewellyn paying little and treating authors like dirt? I'm no disagreeing with the statement, I'd just love to know more.

Basically, they're not paid much for the work they do, and get a lower percentage of profits than other publishing houses would give. I've had the occasion to chat with authors published by that house. The general feeling (granted, it's a small sample of three or four) was that they're viewed as cash cows. Submit your manuscript and piss off.

In the interest of full disclosure, these convos were about a decade ago. Things may well have improved since then. They were also sued over one of their authors, Kisma Stephanich, who plagiarized her books Faery Wicca Parts One and Two and The Gaia Tradition from other authors.

Occult archives: reupload Previous thread:
https://www.reddit.com/r/occult/comments/a8werm/i_have_approximately_130gb_of_occult_material/

Thanks to the redditors that explained the other post was blocked. I didn't realize there were content filtering settings that would block links to file sharing sites. Here's a link to a massive cache of occult material.

Here is the full list of files in the zips: https://pastebin.com/HY1aZu34

Here are the links to download the torrent files: https://pastebin.com/nnsxFda8

These are torrent files so it will take a while to seed them out at first. If you don't have the patience to run your computer for several days straight at first, I'd recommend checking back in 1 week when it should be better seeded. enjoy!

I'm getting a compressed file is corrupted when i try to uncompress.

Everything else folder only has 6.7GB worth of good files.
GRimores has 7.3 GB
Kabbalah 7.4 GB
How about not zipping all the files together and just seeding all of the files with an open file structure? Zipping the files together doesnt really save all that much data since Torrent compresses the files b4 sending it over the wire.

This got a much better response than I was expecting.

I am going to compress the folders to prevent the torrents being overleeched, but the compression rate is only 6-7%. I'm not going to bother trying to optimize it further.

I will upload these torrents to TPB soon and will post again when they're ready.

A pretty basic blast, 2d6 per rank, in an area, targeting fortitude.

The fact that it works for either living or undead casters is handy broadens the range of casters who might take it, though by lvlv 9 you are probably firmyl decided on being one or the other.

The option to spend an extra action for a different area is nice.

Overall, fine for any divine or occult fullcaster; though in some campaigns, it might be totally unsuitable for spontaneous casters. If you are alive and facing mostly alive enemies, probably not deserving of a repertoire slot, and vice-versa for undead. Great if you expect to meet the opposite often, and constructs rarely.

Not a lot to say, not because it's amazing or lame, but because it's very straightforward. It adheres to the typical 2d6 per rank damage pattern, with a choice of two large (if slightly awkward) areas of effect. Action expense is a little annoying for the cone, and lines are rarely useful, but hey, sometimes you devote an entire turn to a good blast. Easy to convert to remaster, negative becomes void and positive becomes vitality. Not helpful if you're a living creature fighting living creatures or undead fighting undead, but it's a perfectly serviceable blast otherwise, and it most likely doesn't hurt your allies, which is really nice. Divine and occult are low on blasts, so it's nice to see a straightforward standard-damage one. Compare to Howling Blizzard, which has similar effects with better action economy on the other two lists. Alternately, compare to 3-action Heal/Harm, which has the perk of both healing and damaging, and which has a better area for some circumstances, but which does a good deal less damage (1d8 averages 4.5 [1-8], 2d6 averages 7 [2-12]). It also just doesn't go as far from you, so if all the enemies are in one direction but they're spaced out, the cone is better.

Divine and occult have lots of Fort save options, but few are this straightforward of a damaging blast; definitely worth picking up if you're blasting on one of those lists, as long as you're fighting undead (or you're undead and fighting the living).

Project AngelBook – Volume X – Parts 1–36

This volume is not made up of my own words.There is no original commentary here, no narrative, no analysis.This is simply me copying and pasting large chunks of text from my bookmarks—pages that were easy to extract, with no hyperlinks or formatting issues, saved from open tabs and archived corners of the web.
It's messy. It's unfiltered. It's chaotic.But it's valuable.
Each piece inside this volume was bookmarked for a reason.Not always because I agreed with it, but because it felt like a fragment of something larger—an insight, a worldview, a download.This is source material, plain and raw.
Fragmenta Ex Machina isn't about authorship.It's about preservation and system-building.It's about feeding the machine—laying bricks for the Operating System I'm constructing across these books.This is the raw intake phase. The memory dump. The zero layer.
Later volumes will be cleaner, more refined, more structured.But this? This is the foundation. The ether stream, bound and frozen before it vanished.
So if you're looking for polished prose, skip this one.But if you're here to explore the roots of something much bigger, this is where the signal begins.
Welcome to the fragments.

This got a much better response than I was expecting.

I am going to compress the folders to prevent the torrents being overleeched, but the compression rate is only 6-7%. I'm not going to bother trying to optimize it further.

I will upload these torrents to TPB soon and will post again when they're ready.

A pretty basic blast, 2d6 per rank, in an area, targeting fortitude.

The fact that it works for either living or undead casters is handy broadens the range of casters who might take it, though by lvlv 9 you are probably firmyl decided on being one or the other.

The option to spend an extra action for a different area is nice.

Overall, fine for any divine or occult fullcaster; though in some campaigns, it might be totally unsuitable for spontaneous casters. If you are alive and facing mostly alive enemies, probably not deserving of a repertoire slot, and vice-versa for undead. Great if you expect to meet the opposite often, and constructs rarely.

Not a lot to say, not because it's amazing or lame, but because it's very straightforward. It adheres to the typical 2d6 per rank damage pattern, with a choice of two large (if slightly awkward) areas of effect. Action expense is a little annoying for the cone, and lines are rarely useful, but hey, sometimes you devote an entire turn to a good blast. Easy to convert to remaster, negative becomes void and positive becomes vitality. Not helpful if you're a living creature fighting living creatures or undead fighting undead, but it's a perfectly serviceable blast otherwise, and it most likely doesn't hurt your allies, which is really nice. Divine and occult are low on blasts, so it's nice to see a straightforward standard-damage one. Compare to Howling Blizzard, which has similar effects with better action economy on the other two lists. Alternately, compare to 3-action Heal/Harm, which has the perk of both healing and damaging, and which has a better area for some circumstances, but which does a good deal less damage (1d8 averages 4.5 [1-8], 2d6 averages 7 [2-12]). It also just doesn't go as far from you, so if all the enemies are in one direction but they're spaced out, the cone is better.

Divine and occult have lots of Fort save options, but few are this straightforward of a damaging blast; definitely worth picking up if you're blasting on one of those lists, as long as you're fighting undead (or you're undead and fighting the living).

Aaaah LHP; either the most circumlocutious method of True Attainment since the first wave of grimoires, or the quickest route to madness, delusion, and other such silliness since...well, the original grimoire-users. As with grimoires, it's all about whether or not you get the joke. -93

I think both RHP and LHP can degenerate to delusions with equal ease. No need to make LHP stand out in that regard. One could even say that the human condition in general is a delusion.

LHP is not necessarily Satanism, btw. Any path that breaks with convention/tradition in some regard is a LHP. Most spiritual paths have LHP elements to them. Some more, some less. In Abrahamic terms, when Jesus rejected some of the traditional Jewish teachings about circumcision and food, he was being a left hand path practitioner himself at the time. He was even crucified for it. :)

Any path that breaks with convention/tradition in some regard is a LHP.

Could you clarify your definition of Left-Hand Path for me? You seem to be suggesting that deviation from tradition is the key distinction. Much of the appeal of Satanism and other paths typically associated with LHP involve the taboo of "evil," not mild deviation from the status quo.

Invites are closed for now as far as I know. I'll bookmark this thread and get back to you if they open again. Have you tried doing the application via IRC? It's simple to do.

It'll go fine. Just write it in notepad then copy and paste. I think you can go to the chat through the webclient too. I used to assess the IRC applications many years ago, as long as you're polite you'll get one.

10 Spells Per Rank -- Occult 2nd Draft
Okay, per my previous thread, I've created a draft resource which tries to help newcomers to (currently Occult) spellcasting by providing a curated selection of 10 spells every rank that are good general choices.

Here's the Google Doc. Commenting is turned on (for now) for everyone, so if you want to leave feedback there, you can. Once I get to final draft, I'll turn off commenting so it stands as just a read-only document.

Commentary on the whole thing:

I was torn on how to handle spells that are good, but are uncommon or rare, or that I thought were a little hard to use, and eventually I decided to handle that by having an "And 5 More" for each level that included spells that had caveats in their utility. I'm open to feedback about whether that's the right choice.

I haven't added rank 10 spells to the guide. It kinda feels to me like rank 10 isn't a "real rank," but what do you all think?

Specific commentary on spells that I included or didn't include.

I'm open to it! I'm going to do ten replies to this OP, one for cantrips and then spells ranks 1-9, to segregate comments on each rank together, just for my ease in consuming the feedback. So please thread your replies about spells in each rank to those replies, as it's otherwise just hard to apply feedback I get from reddit to the actual document.

I am... thinking about making a list for each tradition. :P

It's a fair amount of work, and I know the Occult list better than the others, so while I'd like to do it, I'm not going to make a hard commitment right now.

Cantrips

Detect Magic: This is a fussy spell, but once someone has it, the GM can usually just relax and not make you go through all the mechanics of using it and just tell you whenever there’s something magical in a non-time-limited place.

Eat Fire: A situational spell, but when you’re going up against fire users, having a reaction that can help defend you is pretty great.

Guidance: Repeatable buff for lots of non-combat situations and an okay third action.

Light: Probably only one person in the party needs it, but gives you a lot of flexibility in creating light.

Needle Darts: A flexible attack cantrip, can trigger several weaknesses and good range, slightly better than usual cantrip damage, a good daily driver damage cantrip.

Shield: A solid defensive third action, helps defray caster defensive weakness.

Telekinetic Hand: Gives you a flexible option for non-combat challenges, the ability to touch risky things without putting yourself in danger.

Telekinetic Projectile: The highest damage cantrip that Occult has access to, but without other virtues.

Void Warp: Lower damage than Needle Darts or Telekinetic Projectile, but more reliable because it’s a save instead of an attack roll. Undead are immune to this damage.

Warp Step: A movement cantrip can help you get out of danger.

TK projectile does have another virtue: it can target multiple weaknesses! I'm playing a bard who carries a dagger in his left hand for the purpose of TK projectile. Daggers can do piercing or slashing damage, so I get to choose! Normally there's something around if I want bludgeoning damage but I think the DM would allow me to TK projectile the dagger pommel-first if not.

So I've got cantrips for lots of damage types:

TK projectile: slashing, piercing, bludgeoning

Needle Darts: cold iron, silver

Electric Arc: electricity

And from Composer's Staff:

Haunting Hymn: sonic

I have 12 cantrips lol :)

(I only actually threw the dagger once so far, when I didn't have a face and thought it would be hilarious to hit someone blind with my last action. Almost worked! Meanwhile TKing it has worked great.)

Why Detect Magic over Read Aura? I'm new but Read Aura seems better.

Read Aura has a cast time of 10 minutes, so you can't really use it if you want to know in the moment, "Wait, is this magical?"

Rank 1

Illusory Object: This can be used as a wall to isolate or impede enemies, and is potentially very powerful even if they eventually disbelieve the illusion. Illusion rules are kind of complicated, you may want to discuss with your GM.

Mystic Armor: Probably most useful at levels 3-7, this gives you the equivalent of +1 explorer's clothing earlier and for less cost, but eventually you will want real magic armor.

Runic Weapon: A very powerful buff at levels 1-3, after which your martial buddies will get permanent striking weapons and the spell becomes obsolete.

Phantom Pain: An okay damage option with a good debuff if enemy fails save.

Soothe: The bread-and-butter occult healing spell. Not as good as Heal, but okay, and if you have aspirations to do any healing, you'll want this.

Bless: A solid to-hit buff with a good radius that can be extended further.

Object Reading: Fairly flexible information gathering, GM dependent on how much you'll get from it.

Fear: Fear is short-duration, but debuffs enemy defense and offense simultaneously.

Illusory Disguise: For any complicated disguise, this will supplement Charisma skills instead of replace them, but useful for that purpose or for simple changing your identity.

Protection: For this short-term spell to pay off, you'll probably want it to be on a tank-style ally who is drawing a lot of attacks.

And 5 More

Force Barrage: Does great damage against bosses, but bad damage to normal opponents and is subject to weird every-other-rank heightening and thus bad levels in terms of damage.

Lose the Path: Not a spell you want at low levels. But once your max rank is 3 or 4+, being able to throw an additional first rank spell out and impede enemies becomes valuable.

Sure Strike: At low levels, only valuable if you have a good spell attack, which Occult doesn't necessarily. But at high levels it can be worthwhile just for your cantrip attacks.

Alarm: Once you are no longer using your first rank spells for combat, Alarm gives you lots of peace of mind at the campsite.

Liberating Command: Another spell that gets good once you’re a few levels up, defuses the action penalties of grapple-type attacks.

I would rewrite the description of Phantom Pain a bit. It's easy enough to miss that it's not a basic save and the successful save still does full non-persistent damage and highlighting that for a newer player seems like a good idea.

Also, strategically it's worth noting that this also means it's damage on a successful save per rank is actually higher than powerhouse blasting spells like Thunderstrike (or even Vision of Death). It's overall average might not keep up, but the consistency is very valuable.

I also think the Force Barrage description is a bit too harsh on it's +2 heighten. Slotted spells that heighten +2 don't really suffer like cantrips/focus spells do, as you simply cast them at the rank that you can while spending an appropriately lesser resource to do so. Inevitably you'll end up casting spells at less than your max rank anyway, including numerical/damage spells, so it's not that big of a deal

Plus like, there are also plenty of heighten +1 damage spells that you don't even want to use above their own rank, you mention this with Agonizing Despair due to Vision of Death being better, so it's not a unique concern for heighten +2 spells either.

Only spell I'd consider switching out is Protection for either Sanctuary or Command I think. Rank 1 protection is a bit tricky to ensure enemies don't just switch to a squishier target so it's not as straightforward as I'd like for a newer player.

Otherwise the rank 1 list looks pretty good to me. I wish you well with sorting through what will probably end up being a fair amount of contradictory advice/feedback to improve it. Putting the "Good once you outlevel this spell rank" spells into the and 5 more is a really good idea

Thanks for the detailed comments. I agree that rank 1 Protection isn't great, but I don't think that rank 1 Command or Sanctuary are great either. I've rewritten the Phantom Pain description a bit and will take a look at Force Barrage.

Rank 2

Augury: Can be a good way to figure out if you're walking into a trap. Not necessarily useful if you're in a game where everything is a rigorously appropriate-for-your-level challenge.

Calm: This spell has Incapacitation, so it won't work on opponents whose level is more than 2x the rank it's cast at. But against lower-level opponents, it offers the chance to take multiple creatures largely out of combat entirely.

Dispel Magic: You won't use this often, but when it's useful it's invaluable. Note the counteract check -- it's not automatic.

Laughing Fit: Use it to remove the reaction of creatures with powerful reactions, and if you get the Slowed effect that's a bonus.

Invisibility: It's invisibility.

Loose Time's Arrow: Can be used to advance or retreat, set up flanking, deal with terrain, etc.
Revealing Light: Gives the Dazzled condition to an area for good duration, and can also reveal invisible creatures.

Inner Radiance Torrent: Damage, targets Reflex, which is rare on the Occult list. Damage starts off mediocre but heightens strongly.

Cleanse Affliction: Alleviates diseases, curses, and poisons, or when heightened, counteracts them. Won't be useful that often, but when it is useful, it's big.

Blistering Invective: Persistent fire damage, potentially a lot of damage but spread out over time, also Frightened on failed saves.

And 5 More

Instant Armor: Many casters will wear explorer's clothing that can be slept in/worn almost all the time. Others may find that they sleep in safe areas and never really need to don their armor quickly. But if you do wear armor, you may find that you need Instant Armor dozens of times per campaign -- when ambushed in the night, when in a social occasion that turns into combat, when you need to swim then fight, and more.

Translate: Some games just don’t like to deal with language problems. For all others, you may want Translate.

Marvelous Mount: Not useful in dungeon crawls or for the most part urban games. And you won’t want to use a max rank slot on it. But the mount eventually gains a lot of powerful abilities and if you do use overland travel, not having to actually deal with a fragile living mount is great.

Illusory Creature: There’s a lot going on with this spell. It’s a pretty good combat pseudo-summon that also has a lot of use as a subterfuge/deception/heist tool, but it also has a ton of different limitations and drawbacks that can make it hard to use. For people who want to think about how to get good use out of it.

Thundering Dominance: This can only be cast on an eidolon or animal companion, and you probably don’t have those. But if you do have them, it’s fantastic: huge damage for a rank 2 spell, AoE, and a debuff. Plus a bonus to a useful skill. It heightens slowly so it eventually becomes obsolete.

I'd like to solicit Mirror Image in place of Instant Armor, or really even further up the list. There are two reasons this spell is a Big Deal.

IMMUNITY TO CRITS when a boss with a 50% crit rate swings at you, this spell will reduce that Crit to a mere Success. Nothing else in the game provides this type of protection, even before considering how it reduces hits to misses.

I feel like the action cost of Mirror Image is a really big deal, and it's not immunity to crits -- it's mitigation of crits. That said, Fearcracker is interesting.

Animus Mine is an occult-unique spell that basically functions as a FREE ATTACK the first time a monster tries to unleash its Frightful Presence on you. Mental effects are really common. If you cast it before a dungeon, there is an 80% chance its going to hit something, and it hits HARD for ZERO ACTIONS in combat.

I personally like preparing or retraining this as a spell known in my 2nd- or 3rd-highest rank spell slot. Putting it in your highest-rank slot IS effective, but I'd rather be able to cast it twice - getting this spell in a Wand that you upgrade as you level up wouldn't be a bad alternative.

I'm always a huge proponent of Telekinetic Maneuver. 60ft range Disarm, Shove, Reposition or TRIP. It uses your spell attack for the roll instead of Athletics.

Its a great debuff spell that is useful in nearly all situations and absolutely shines against flying enemies. Even if you don't prepare it, its usually worthwhile to carry a scroll just in case.

Its main issue being that your spell attack roll is usually lower than an athletics check of a martial.

Rank 3

Day’s Weight: Gives both an offensive and defensive debuff, at good range, for one round on success but the whole combat on failure.

Familiar’s Face: Allows you to use your familiar for extensive scouting, without any arguments about the familiar’s ability to act far from you (because you command them through sustaining the spell) or to recognize important details (because you can directly see, not have them report later)

Haste: Due to MAP, this is far more of a movement buff than an attack buff, but movement buffs are good.

Heroism: The premiere single-target buff in the game, giving you +1 (or more as it is heightened) to basically everything except AC and damage, on a nice 10 minute duration that will sometimes allow you to pre-buff. The heightens are very worthwhile.

Slow: The fail and crit fail effects of this are devastating, and the success effect is okay, making it the debuff of choice against single powerful monsters (as long as their Fort save isn’t too high).

Agonizing Despair: It’s like the 3rd Rank Vision of Death. Okay damage plus good frightened debuff, but don’t heighten it, take Vision of Death instead which is strictly better at 4th rank.

Invisibility Sphere: Sometimes you want the whole party to be invisible.

Roaring Applause: Very similar to Laughing Fit, both spells deny reactions even on successful save and add slowed on failure. Roaring Applause makes it so that a martial with reactive strike can also get a free attack in on the target every round.

(Special Note) Fear 3: Fear becomes multi-target when heightened to rank 3. Multi-target debuffs are valuable ways to turn the tide of a battle by giving the entire enemy side a bad round, and remain valuable casts even when they are considerably below your max rank spells.

(Special Note) Protection 3: Giving all your front liners +1 to AC is very solid.

And 5 More

Wooden Double: Getting critically hit is common for casters and can take almost all of your hit points in one shot. Reducing critical hits by 25 damage (or more with heightening) can be a lifesaver, though you probably don't want to spend a max-rank slot on it. Also lets you step out of the way of follow-up attacks.

Time Jump: Once you are no longer using your 3rd rank spells as your combat mainstays, Time Jump gives you a good chunk of reactive-strike-free mobility to get out of sticky situations. May also have some use as a sneaking tool, especially if you have Subtle Spell.

Dream Message: Lots of games may go by where you never need long-distance communications. But if you do need to use a magical telephone, this is the first one available, and it's pretty good, giving you a lot of message length and range in exchange for a delay in delivering it.

Ooze Form: Damage resistance, crit and precision immunity, and extra hit points gives you durability even though your AC is garbage. Handy to deal with situations where melee monsters get up to you. But battle forms have to be used with care: they don't make you a martial.

As a GM, my most feared Occult 3 spell is Hypercognition.

SIX instantaneous Recall Knowledge checks can grant you an insane amount of critical information in a split instant, and its only become stronger in Remaster now that Lore skills from ancestries and backgrounds scale automatically. You might think its strongest on an INT-based occult caster with big skill mods, but actually its the Charisma characters that can use it best in social scenes - instantly gaining the full reputation, rumors, family history, motivations, and personal quirks of an NPC they want to manipulate. In combat, you can use this to instantly reveal the full gimmick of a dangerous boss or the full shutdown conditions for an ongoing hazard.

Gravity Well is also a great multipurpose utility/combat spell, capable of granting instant movement to allies, CCing enemies, disrupting the environment, and setting up a fellow caster with a small-radius spell like Grease or Sleep or for throwing people back into sustained AoEs like Stinking Cloud or Aqueous Orb. Massive AoE, Reflex-based, safe to friendly-fire.

Clairvoyance: Lets you check past a wall or door and see what you're getting yourself into. It's short-range and inflexible, but gives you safe scouting options that a rogue or familiar doesn't always have.

Fly: Pathfinder has worked to make flight a little less of an unbeatable tactical advantage, but there are still going to be occasions where having flight solves a fight (or prevents it from being solved in the enemy's favor). Also has good exploration uses.

Vision of Death: Solid (though not amazing) damage plus a Fear spell, at long range, this is a mainstay single-target damage spell for the Occult list.

Translocate: Teleport about twice as far as you can probably Stride for the same number of actions. Good escape options in combat, avoid traps/difficult terrain or go across gaps in either combat or exploration.

Enervation: Persistent void damage and, on failure or better, drained, which gives more damage and a penalty to Fort saves. To probably two opponents.

Resilient Sphere: Waste most of your opponent's round breaking out, and as a panic option you can protect yourself or an ally for a little while.

Telepathy: Allows you to communicate with your allies in stealth situations or have private conferences while talking to NPCs. Note the somewhat awkward lack of Subtle trait, so if you don't have Conceal Spell you might have a hard time casting it in the first place.

Honeyed Words: A lot of Occult casters use Charisma as their spellcasting attribute. If you do, your social skills are already probably pretty good, and a fat +4 bonus for 10 minutes can help you talk lie your way out of trouble.

Mercurial Stride: This gives you mobility plus a decent debuff plus mediocre damage. Its value is in doing all three, so use it when you need to move but don't want to lose some offense that turn. Note that it offers no protection from reactive strike and a decent number of creatures are immune to poison.

(Special Note) Invisibility 4: Turns Invisibility into a powerful combat buff.

And 5 More

Vapor Form: Mostly useful as an infiltration spell, letting you go under doors, through chimneys, etc. May want to talk to your GM about how they're going to play stealth with this spell. Can also sometimes be a panic button in combat, but that's a secondary use.

Replicate: This has all kinds of complicated deceptive uses, but it's also a way to create a straightforward disposable scout.

Rank 5

Synesthesia: The debuff that does it all -- a big AC/Reflex penalty, movement speed penalty, and a flat chance to fail on both strikes and spells.

Sending: Magical telephone, or maybe text messaging, short messages but unlimited range and no delay.

Scouting Eye: This combines the mobility of a familiar or person scouting with the lack of risk and unobtrusiveness of clairvoyance. Allows you to scout out an area remotely (but not from very far away). Has a problem with doors.

Synaptic Pulse: It's Incapacitation, but a large area that's friendly to your allies, eats actions from all enemies in a melee that's going wrong. Once you have rank 6 Slow, it will mostly obsolete Synaptic Pulse, but until then this can turn the tide of a battle.

Shadow Siphon: If you cast at your max rank, it's likely that you'll succeed the counteract check on all but a critical failure, unless you're facing a fairly high-level boss, so this is a high-success way to halve damage from a spell or magical effect.

Blister: Action hungry and very dependent on the first Fort save of the primary target, but offers a lot of potential damage for the slot.

Telekinetic Haul: Move around very large objects. Lots of ability to apply your ingenuity to here, mostly in exploration mode.

Telepathic Bond: Secure, silent comms for your party all day. Initially of use in special situations where communication and stealth is at a premium, eventually just a routine precaution.

(Special Note) Command 5: No effect on success makes this hard to recommend for the first rank version, but the party-friendly multitarget offers another (non-Incapacitation) tide turner as you can disarm or make to flee every opponent in the fight. Note also that it denies reactions.

(Special Note) See the Unseen 5: Do you want to just not be troubled by invisibility (and also get a bonus against illusions) for a full working day? Of course you do.

And 5 More

Etheric Shards: Not a very impressive spell against size medium or smaller creatures, but for larger creatures the damage gets very large because they take it “per square traversed,” which basically multiplies it by the size of their footprint.

Umbral Journey: This spell is uncommon, so you may not get access to it. If you do, it’s sort of “teleport light,” allowing you to cover 24 days of overland travel (hundreds of miles) in one day. It also has a more generous limit of creatures affected than Teleport does.

Wave of Despair: Similar to Synaptic Pulse in that it removes reactions and potentially eats some actions to an area. Less immediate and the area is less easy and friendly, but no Incapacitation.

Rank 6

Vampiric Exsanguination: Does Fireball-equivalent damage in a large cone and gives you a bit of healing besides. Damage type isn’t great, but if you have a non-living partymember that’s a nice bonus.

Wall of Force: Wall spells can divide one challenging encounter into two trivial encounters in a single moment, and Wall of Force is highly durable and has a good length.

Suspended Retribution: The damage is good, and is Reflex-targeting, but the enemy basically has a choice between the control effect, spending actions, or taking the damage.

Phantom Orchestra: Does 2/3rds the damage you’d expect per time it’s activated, so if you use it once it’s quite bad, twice and it’s better than you’d expect for its rank, and three times and you’ve got twice the efficiency that you’d expect from a 6th rank spell. Three rounds is a long time, though. Heightens poorly.

Phantasmal Calamity: It’s a will-save Fireball that gives up 1d6 of damage in for a larger burst and a deeply unlikely but extremely crippling 2% of the time critical fail effect.

Cast into Time: Yet another area effect damage spell, this one is fort-save, gives sickened on fail/crit fail, and has a weird disappearance effect that I suppose lets you rush past the targets with your last action.

Scintillating Safeguard: (Realize I forgot this one, will put in commentary soon)

Unexpected Transposition: Lets you negate a hit, either automatically by putting it on your ally or high-risk/high-reward by putting it on an enemy. If you're a Witch or have a temporary summon, consider your familiar/summon as a target for this spell.

(Special Note) Slow 6: When heightened to rank 6, Slow becomes a multi-target debuff that absolutely upends the action economy of any combat that features 3+ enemies. Its only real weakness is short range.

(Special Note) Roaring Applause 6: Roaring Applause is also multi-target at level 6, and with a more generous range basically guaranteed to be able to hit the entire enemy group. Unless the enemies are heavily Reaction-oriented, its effect is probably a little less good than Slow, but it also targets Will which may be better.

And 5 More

Teleport: Uncommon, so may not be available. If it is, it's the premiere way to travel long distances quickly.

Scrying: Uncommon, so may not be available. Spy on people from planetary range. Lots of irritating limitations, but gives you the ability to gather information no matter where you are.

Rank 7

True Target: An absolutely brutal one-action boss-killer, this lets all of your martials get Sure Strike against one target. Best when stacked with other bonuses to increase the chances of crits. If you have a Magus on your team, hit him up for $10 every time you cast this spell.

Energy Aegis: A very modest resistance amount, but to every elemental damage type and it lasts all day. Best if you're going into an intense day of lots of fights.

Shock to the System: A safety net if someone gets blown straight past Dying to dead, plus some reasonable healing.

Telekinetic Bombardment: Fireball-equivalent damage with a smaller (but possibly somewhat flexible) area, ref save, with some decent riders (difficult terrain, knocked prone, and stunned).

Tempest of Shades: Huge area, party-friendly drained (which is also okay-ish damage) on a fort save and afraid on a will save. Unfortunately, the fear effect is delayed, and the damage isn't that great, so you probably want this if you can capitalize on the drained condition -- and certainly Occult has plenty of fort-save spells.

Mask of Terror: Put it on your tank to repeatedly give frightened 2. Note that this doesn't work that well if your party gives lots of blanket status penalties, which frightened doesn't stack with.

(Special Note) Haste 7: Heightened to rank 7, Haste affects six targets, which probably is roughly equivalent to "your entire party." This allows significant movement shenanigans to cut into the enemy action economy, or prevents them from doing the same to you. Note that due to MAP and the restrictions of Haste, it is mostly a movement buff.

(Special Note) Fly 7: Heightened to rank 7, Fly has a 1 hour duration, allowing pre-buffing and for it to be in effect for multiple fights. It's still single-target, making it somewhat difficult to have the entire party flying, but that may work in combination with flying heritages and magic items, or if there is a particular partymember who can make great use of flight, it may be an every day spell. Otherwise, lets you solve particular problem fights/exploration tasks.

And 5 More

Inexhaustible Cynicism: This spell is at its core a multi-target slowed that opponents can ignore at the cost of taking 6d6 damage. This isn't a bad spell by any means, but it's outclassed by rank 6 Slow. The additional rider is that it absolutely ruins cooperation between the enemy group, preventing them from buffing each other, flanking, and even verbal communications. In most fights, this doesn't really matter and it's just a worse Slow 6, but when fighting highly coordinated enemies it's worth a look -- and it's not that much worse than Slow 6 if you do use it slightly suboptimally.

Ethereal Jaunt: Uncommon, so may not be available. Think of this as an upgraded Vapor Form, allowing extremely powerful but short-duration scouting and infiltration. Also an escape button in combat.

Rank 8

Quandary: Extremely powerful single-target “time out” spell, with no save. The very best case for a creature is they lose their reaction until their next turn and then one action, but many enemies will expect to lose 2+ rounds from the combat. Note that this is useless against a solo boss.

Prismatic Wall: It’s a wall. It’s incredibly punitive to try to break through in combat time, people will just have to go around/over it, which isn’t necessarily that hard at this level, so consider your combat.

Spirit Song: Slightly-better-than-Fireball damage to a large cone. If it ever gets remastered, it’ll do spirit damage, in the meantime it does force damage that awkwardly recreates spirit damage (your GM can and probably should just rule it does spirit damage). No riders or anything fancy, just a bunch of damage.

Disappearance: Invisibility on steroids. With a 10 minute duration and no “hostile action” clause, you can prebuff for a fight with it. Note that, like Invisibility, it’s Subtle, so you can cast it without people easily hearing you or seeing a lightshow.

(Special Note) Suggestion 8: At rank 4, this is a single-target incapacitation spell with no effect on successful save, which makes it hard to recommend despite its very powerful failure effect. At rank 8, it becomes multi-target. It’s still pretty unreliable with no effect on success, but you can easily take targets entirely out of combat if they fail saves.

And 5 More

Mind Blank: Uncommon, so may not be available. If it is, it’s a powerful all-day defensive effect against mental effects. Certainly strong, but the question is whether you can devote a rank 8 slot for a fairly narrow single-target defensive effect. (The answer is “probably not most of the time, but if you know you’re facing a mentally-affecting foe, then yes.”)

Confusion 8 isn't an Incapacitate effect, but it really should be. Absolutely destroys encounters, especially if you can use your 3rd action in the round to "not be a valid target" for the ensuing brawl you've just created. Note that even on a successful save, you still hit a badguy for Stun 1.

Paralyze 8 IS incapacitation, but far deadlier if your team is poised to make Strike attacks.

Charm 8 is also incap, but 10 targets switching to "friendly" for an entire day can completely redefine an entire adventure. Remember that Charmed enemies don't automatically aggro after the duration wears off, so if you treat them well, they can become genuine allies. With the subtle trait, it doesn't ruin social scenes if only half the targets fail their saves.

for the "5 more" list: Pinpoint is the no-nonsense solution to 50% of all adventures' problems, and the creation of an unlimited number of stupid ideas. Combos to devastating effect with Translocate 5, if you're already within a mile-radius of the McGuffin. Use cheaper Augury slots to identify a good target for Pinpoint. If the McGuffin is inside an antimagic plot box, go steal the key to plot box. If the key to the plot box isn't available, bushwack an enemy lieutenant and disguise yourself as them. In between adventures, you can casually combine it with Teleport to describe how you spent the weekend vacation in the Arcadian Sea digging up insanely-potent lost artifacts of Ancient Azlant.

And a note on MindBlank: it blocks See the Unseen, and most other magical counters to invisibility.

Rank 9

Phantasmagoria: A little less than Fireball damage to whatever you want within 120 feet, plus loss-of-reactions or confusion. The narrative power of Phantasmagoria is that you can selectively effect hundreds of creatures while perfectly discriminating out your allies, and that is probably wasted in real combat. But gives you solid damage and significant debuffs in a way that you'll never have to work hard to get use out of.

Overwhelming Presence: Basically opponents must burn either two or six actions for the spell (unless they crit succeed), and can't use hostile actions against you until they do. In a nice big radius, and with discrimination against friendly targets (I think -- slightly unclear), but it's incapacitation.

Foresight: Hourlong defensive buff that allows you to spend your reaction to give disadvantage on an attack roll or advantage on a save.

Wails of the Damned: Large area damage spell that's party-friendly and inflicts damage and drained (and note that at this level each level of drained is 15+ additional damage). The actual damage is unimpressive, so it hinges on getting a decent drained, and its damage type is not great, but sets up other Fort save damage spells.

(Special Note) Synesthesia 9: Synesthesia becomes multi-target at rank 9. This is a little less good than you might think -- one of the benefits of multi-target debuffs is that you can toss them off with less-than-your-max-rank-slot and have a really powerful effect on a fight, which is obviously lost with a rank 9 spell. Nevertheless, the powerful debuff of Synesthesia affecting the whole enemy group is obviously a big effect.
And 5 More

Unspeakable Shadow: This gives frightened plus an effect that makes you spend one of your actions either attacking or fleeing from your shadow while you are frightened. I think that the concept of this is that it's worse than a Slow because you either have to tick up your MAP or else flee (and provoke reactions/move yourself out of position). However, as-written, you can just use your final action to Strike, making it just Slowed 1 in 99% of cases. Ask your GM if the enemy can be forced to spend their first action, or at least not their last action dealing with the shadow -- if they'll go for that, it's a solid single-target debuff. Otherwise, it's highly unimpressive.

There are countless occult books to suit all tastes and pockets, to say nothing of those that are freely available online (legally or otherwise); but it is better by far to have studied and to know internally, as a part of ourselves, a few of the very best books than it is to have merely read seven hundred, or even seven thousand, lesser works. That said, those interested in what is perhaps the best collection books online that are available to read for free may be interested in exploring the Internet Sacred Text Archive.

There's also an Android app called The Occult Library. It's got links to thousands of books, as well.

There are a few ads on the app, but it brings you to a website that has a listing of the files, so you don't even need the app. They can be read online and they're downloadable. Part 1 is 207G

https://yadi.sk/d/F62id7cX3Mj65x

Part 2 is 227G

https://yadi.sk/d/BNNwiZJ33MiHvM

It's a treasure trove!

Edit: grammar

Just to add, there's a similar but bigger collection on The Pirate Bay (629 PDFs / 4.29Gb). Here's the magnet:

(It includes the super rare Temple of Vampire books!)

I've accrued a PDF library of about 50 books and I just got an e-reader to put them on because I HATE reading books on my laptop. This is a perfectly welcomed addition! Thank you very much!

Occult Books for sincere seekers seasons greetings
As ever at this Special Season we like to reward our regular readers for their loyal support throughout the year by publishing a Christmas article. This year John Temple has written an analysis of a spine-tingling tale by M. R. James.

We review and recommend many books on occult, philosophical, scientific and religious subjects
The first point of wisdom is to discern that which is false, and the second, to know that which is true.

Lactantius — 'Institutiones Divinae'

Introduction
We have not reviewed any books about the so-called 'left-hand path' (LHP), witchcraft, wicca, the fantasies of conspiracy theorists or the speculations of psychics and mediums. If that's what you're looking for you won't find it here. the search for truth
The Search for Truth is a unique investigation in twelve chapters that explores the many links between Religion and the Occult, focusing especially on the hidden meaning concealed within the Bible and its many correspondences with the Wisdom Teachings of ancient Egypt. During the course of the book the author gradually introduces the keys to the Mystery Language without which it is impossible to unlock the hidden meaning within any sacred writings, some of which pre-date Christianity by many millennia. The book covers a wide range of subjects that include, but are not limited to: an occult analysis of folly and wisdom, hidden wisdom in the Bible and how and why it was concealed; the problem of good and evil; the real nature of God and man; the esoteric meaning of Christmas and Easter; the concealed meaning of some of the parables of Jesus; the origins and dogma of original sin and how this relates to the so-called 'fall of man'; the facts and fictions of the Christian Church; the secrets of the ancient Egyptian religion; the Wisdom Literature of Egypt compared and contrasted with the proverbs in the Bible; the right and wrong use of talent and what it really is; the magical power of prayer; and much, much more.

The content and arrangement of this book differs from the series of twelve articles John Temple wrote for this website between 2013 to 2019. The main changes are the exclusion of the first two articles in the online series, namely 'Searching for Truth' and 'Who are the Real Illuminati', and the addition of 'Folly and Wisdom' and 'The anatomy of Sin'. These two articles were published separately from the series in 2021 and 2024 respectively. The author decided, rightly in our view, that these two articles — both dealing with vitally important aspects of the search for truth — were more relevant to a printed book than the excluded articles, neither of which fitted into it quite as effectively or harmoniously. We feel sure that lovers of John Temple's invaluable contributions to this website will see the wisdom of this change and appreciate having these two articles included in this new book.

The Search for Truth is available in two different formats: a hardcover edition limited to 500 copies and a full vellum deluxe edition (see note below). The monochrome colour frontispiece and chapter headings are beautifully illustrated by Kateryna Zubakhina. The book includes a brief biography of the author which will be welcomed by his many fans and a comprehensive bibliography which serious occult students will find invaluable. Finally, as some casual visitors have queried our claim to be 'not for profit' whilst promoting a book that is being sold by a commercial publisher, we wish to make it quite clear that any profits accruing from the sale of The Search for Truth will firstly, be used to fund future printed editions of our articles, and secondly, go to John Temple — or more likely his pet parrot — but not to us!

A full Vellum deluxe edition, price to be announced, will be available from the publisher in late 2024 or early 2025.

astral conversations
This unusual book is neither fiction nor non-fiction, but combines both genres in a unique way. The main narrative is the record of twelve lively and sometimes humorous conversations between two occult students overheard clairaudiently by the author. The two interlocutors — Arthur Flitterflop and Joshua Bombast — meet in the astral world to discuss many different subjects, including magic, masters, conspiracy theories, the illuminati, aliens, planet 'x', 'Ascension', 'DNA activation', consciousness, dreams, life after death, Tibetan magic, Shamans, drugs, channeling, witchcraft, paganism, the tarot, fate versus free will, necromancy, heaven and hell, and much more.

The secondary narrative consists of separate commentaries which follow each of the twelve conversations in the book. A similar format has been used before in print, most notably in The Comte de Gabalis, reviewed on our Occult Biography Books page. Bombast and Flitterflop are based on real individuals well-known to the author whose names have been deliberately changed to protect their identities. During the course of their conversations the reader is gradually introduced to a number of little-known occult laws and principles which have rarely appeared in print before. These reveal who and what man truly is, his material and spiritual origins and the purpose of life on earth.

Some of the subjects Bombast and Flitterflop discuss will be familiar to readers, others will not. What makes this book stand out from the mass of modern occult literature is that it does not consist of the author's personal beliefs, opinions or speculations. All the facts, information and teachings in this book rest on the solid foundation of the Ancient Wisdom, gathered together over many thousands of years, which the profound learning of all the greatest Teachers and Philosophers, aided by Divine Inspiration, has recorded for our minds to dwell on, so that we might behold Truth. There is a comprehensive bibliography at the end of the book which lists the many occult, philosophical and scientific sources the author has drawn upon.

For technical reasons the twelve chapters in this book are presented in a slightly different manner to the articles on our website. However, with the exception of a Preface by the author and a Foreword by the publisher, the content is identical. You can watch a video review of the book on YouTube by 'The Lunar Key'. We would add that the reviewer has no connection with us or the publisher.

Serpents of Wisdom—by Edda Livingston
Originally self-published in 1994 by the author on her own (now defunct) website, Argotique.

Available TO READ & DOWNLOAD HERE IN PDF FORMAT

The author made this remarkable book freely available to all who wished to read it during her lifetime. We have followed her generous example by doing the same in creating our PDF, using many of the same illustrations she used. Written in a refreshingly down-to-earth manner, Serpents of Wisdom describes the search for a genuine Spiritual Master in plain language, indicating the many traps and false teachings the sincere seeker may encounter along the way with insight, warmth and wry humour.

It is impossible in a short review such as this to do justice to the wealth of real occult facts and information packed into this little book of just 72 pages, but the following are some of the many subjects covered: false masters; why asceticism does not lead to illumination; how to distinguish false teachers from genuine ones; willpower; alchemy; true faith versus mere optimism; karma and destiny; magic; reincarnation; sensible spiritual meditation; mental transformation; the higher and lower selves; black magic in modern science (this will be an eye-opener for many); the importance of simplicity; real, effective prayer; and how to make oneself ready for the True Teacher.

Those who have spent many years swimming in an ocean of New Age nonsense, will welcome the clarity this book sheds on the many wrong teachings and speculations masquerading as Truth. The author pulls no punches in lambasting the many past and present vultures in human form who prey upon the weaknesses and gullibility of those seeking a spiritual Master. For this reason alone, we highly recommend this unusual little book to the beginner in occult studies, as well as those who are well advanced upon the path to the Light. You can read a short extract from this book in the sidebar further down this page.

There cannot be many readers interested in the occult who have not heard of this book. Manly P. Hall self-published this monumental survey of the ancient wisdom and the occult sciences at his own expense in 1928. The only reason we have not reviewed it before is that until recently the book was both scarce and expensive. Fortunately, an excellent e-text is now available at Sacred Texts which is freely available for all to read online. So far as we have been able to ascertain this is an exact facsimile of the original edition complete with all the black and white illustrations found in the printed book, though the colour illustrations which fronted each chapter in the first edition of 1928 and reprints of it, have been omitted for reasons of economy and copyright. There is also an illustrated paperback reprint published by TarcherPerigee in 2003 which is verbatim with the original edition (See note at end).

Those who study this book in its entirety will gain a broad understanding of such varied subjects as the Qabbalah, Alchemy, Magic, Astrology, Neo-Platonism, Egyptian Hermetic Philosophy, Pythagorean mathematics, Native American myths, the esotericism of the Shakespearean dramas, the various Mystery Religions and ancient Mystery Schools of Greece and Egypt, and their modern offshoots of Rosicrucianism and Freemasonry. The number of ancient and modern sources Hall drew upon for his magnum opus is quite extraordinary. Aside from the works of Plato, Aristotle, Plutarch and Iamblichus, he cites translations of the Gnostic, Nicene, and Hermetic literature, the writings of Paracelsus, Ptolemy, Roger Bacon, Basil Valentine, Cornelius Agrippa, Eliphas Levi and H. P. Blavatsky, to name just a few of the most well-known writers on the ancient wisdom and occult sciences.

This is not to say that the book does not contain several errors. Among these may be mentioned Hall's contention that the Roma or Gypsies came from Egypt, a view which was popular in the 19th and early 20th centuries. We now know this to be incorrect. He also contends that the Tarot may be traced back to the religious symbolism of the ancient Egyptians, when in fact it was the product of the Rosicrucians of the 18th century who drew upon the Jewish mysticism of the Qabbalah for its symbolism, not the ancient Egyptian Wisdom teachings. But these shortcomings in no way spoil what is one of the most comprehensive surveys of the ancient Wisdom and occult sciences ever compiled, and that is the reason we recommend Manly P Hall's book to our readers.

IMPORTANT NOTE! There are now several editions of this book available including various 'print-on-demand' and Kindle versions which are badly typeset and omit many or all of the illustrations of the original. The most complete edition is the hardcover "University Edition" published by the Philosophical Research Society (PRS) in 2008, but at $225 this is very expensive. The "Reduced Size Paperback" published in 1978 and reprinted in 1988 and 2000 by the PRS, costs $75. This includes 54 symbolic colour plates, foldouts and an overlay as well as 200 black and white illustrations, an extensive bibliography and complete index. ISBN 10: 0-89314-830-X. There is also a hardcover edition of this book, price $95 from PRS. ISBN-10: 0-89314-548-3 and a paperback compact "Reader's Edition" with 100 black and white illustrations and a 16-page colour insert, price $26 from PRS. ISBN-10: 1585422509. Finally, there is the illustrated paperback reprint mentioned above, published by TarcherPerigee in 2003. This contains most, but not all of the illustrations included in the original edition of 1928 but omitted from many of the subsequent reprints.

Ralph Waldo Trine presents the eternal Spiritual and material truths of Life in a clear and simple manner which all can understand. It requires no great intellect or education to apply the very simple laws which he so beautifully reveals in this inspired book. In the degree that you do so you will change sadness into joy, failure into success and weakness into strength.

Although claimed by many as a pioneer of 'New Age' teaching, there is nothing in Trine's message that was not known and taught thousands of years ago. We hear the same truths from the immortal lips of inspired teachers like Jesus, Buddha and Krishna. Trine's great accomplishment was to re-state these truths in simple words that even a child can understand and to make them accessible to millions. This is no accident; for the truth is always simple if we are simple enough to recognise it when it is presented to us. Sadly, so many seekers desire mystery, glamour and complexity. Such will turn away from the simplicity of this book. But the simple in mind and heart will recognise the Truth within its luminous pages.

It will remind them in no uncertain manner that the keys to health, happiness and success are to be found within and not without. As the Author says in his Prelude: "THE optimist is right. The pessimist is right. The one differs from the other as the light from the dark. Yet both are right. Each is right from their own particular point of view, and this point of view is the determining factor in the life of each. It determines as to whether it is a life of power or of impotence...of success or of failure."

How true these words are! Do we not all know seekers whose 'glass is always half-empty'?—who fear the worst and anticipate disaster and disappointment at every turn? And is it not also true that such people often live lives of sorrow, confusion, ill-health and failure? But it needn't be like this. In US lies the power to change our own individual lives for the better. And in the degree that we do so we shall change the lives of others around us and the world in general. This is the simple way to bring peace and light into this sorely-troubled world. It needs no 'occult powers' nor special training to do so. All it requires is an understanding of the TRUE LAWS of Life and a willingness to put them into practise in our daily lives. This is the SIMPLE message which Ralph Waldo Trine gave to the world over 100 years ago.

Read an abstract adapted from the Introduction to the book

upanishads
The Upanishads have rightly been described as the 'Himalayas of the Soul' and we regard this selection from them by Juan Mascaro as the finest and most accurate translations ever rendered into English. Readers who are unfamiliar with these sublime spiritual treatises on Man, God and the Universe are advised to read our abstract adapted from the translator's introduction to the book.

Born in Majorca of Spanish parents in 1897, Juan Mascaro's own search for Truth began at the tender age of 13 when he studied a book on occultism. This led to his discovery of an inferior English translation of the Bhagavad Gita which inspired him to learn Sanskrit by himself. He went on to study and teach at Cambridge University, in England, where he lectured on the spiritual values in the Bible and Spanish mysticism. He died in Cambridge in 1987 at the ripe old age of 90, having left the world some of the finest translations of the sacred texts of Hinduism ever written.

Rabindranath Tagore, the famous Bengali poet wrote in a letter to Mascaro that he had "caught from those great words the inner voice that goes beyond the boundaries of words." We agree and do not doubt that Mascaro's early occult studies greatly helped him to imbue his masterly translation with the fire of true inspiration which shines from every page of this book. For this is an occult book in the best and highest sense of that much misunderstood word, which contains some of the most elevated spiritual truths ever composed by the hand of man.

These timeless treatises upon Truth are as far removed from the dry and dusty curiosities of religious scholarship as the Sun is removed from a guttering candle in a dark cellar filled with bemused bats. H. P. Blavatsky tells us that upa-ni-shad is a compound word meaning "the conquest of ignorance by the revelation of secret, spiritual knowledge." Mascaro confirms this in his introduction where he says that Upanishad means to "sit at the feet of the Master", which means the same and is the same, for one cannot learn the true occult sciences without a spiritual Master as we point out in many of our articles. The Upanishads are to the Vedas what the Qabbalah is to the Jewish Bible. They treat of and expound the secret meaning of the Vedic texts and the occult sciences.

Every sincere seeker who truly longs to scale the mountain of Truth should read the Upanishads, for in few other sacred texts can we find such clear and simple instructions to guide the feet of the traveller on the path to the Light.

We first read John Anthony West's groundbreaking reinterpretation of the science and civilisation of Egypt more than 30 years ago and were deeply impressed by it. We remain impressed today, for what he has to say about the wisdom of ancient Egypt has rarely been expressed more clearly or completely by any other popular author. West challenged the prevailing dogmas about ancient Egypt for the very first time, providing a generation of readers with information which had either been suppressed, ignored or misinterpreted by orthodox archaeologists and Egyptologists.

The service West has rendered to scholars and ordinary readers alike cannot be underestimated. By summarising and extending the work of the philosopher and mathematician, R. A. Schwaller de Lubicz, he has not only made the ancient Egyptian sciences of art, architecture, mathematics, geometry and philosophy comprehensible to the lay reader who knows little or nothing about these subjects, but provided the serious occult student with a wealth of hitherto scarce and invaluable information on the hidden wisdom of ancient Egypt.

While we would recommend Schwaller de Lubicz's own books to those who wish to delve more deeply into the sacred sciences of ancient Egypt, his magnum opus—The Temple of Man—runs to over 1,000 pages and is not cheap at nearly £170 for the hardcover edition published by Inner Traditions in 1998. For most readers, Serpent in the Sky covers the same ground as de Lubicz, and is considerably easier to read.

West is no New Age apologist promoting the weirder speculations of conspiracy theorists, but a conscientious and accomplished scholar who has the advantage over most orthodox Egyptologists in that he writes with great clarity, acuity and humour, dispelling the many popular misconceptions which surround the subject of ancient Egypt and its civilisation with rapier-like wit and inescapable logic. If you are fascinated by ancient Egypt (and we know few seekers after truth who are not) you will not be disappointed by this book.

NOTE: The paperback edition published in 1993 includes an update on the author's dating of the Sphinx.

Secrets of the Great Pyramid—by Peter Tompkins
Penguin Books, London 1978. ISBN 0140051082. Softcover, 416pp.
Price secondhand from £10.00.

secrets of the great pyramid
Although written over 40 years ago, this lavishly illustrated book remains the most comprehensive compendium of accurate facts and data about the Great Pyramid we know. As secondhand copies of the 1978 softcover edition (shown at right) are readily available in the UK and USA for less than £10 there has never been a better time to add this book to your occult library. Many contemporary writers about Egypt, such as Graham Hancock, John Anthony West (see previous review) and Robert Bauval, have drawn much of their material from the enormous amount of data Tompkins collected together for his book.

The book contains over 300 illustrations from sources ranging from the twenty-volume survey of Egypt commissioned by Napoleon to the first photographs taken inside the Pyramid in 1865; and an appendix by Professor Stecchini on the relations of ancient measures to the Great Pyramid. From the first Arabian investigations in the 8th century, to the latest theories and explanations, this book relates the complete history of the exploration of the Great Pyramid. Peter Tompkins recounts the explorations and adventures of the archaeologists, treasure-hunters, soldiers, scientists and eccentrics who have tunnelled into and studied the Pyramid over many centuries. He analyses the various theories as to how and why the Pyramid was built, and its relation to other monumental structures of antiquity, including Stonehenge and the ziggurats of Babylon.

Whilst we would not necessarily endorse all the author's conclusions about the purpose and function of the Great Pyramid, we know of no other book in which so many different theories have been presented in such a thoroughly sensible and scientific manner. This is in sharp contrast to many newer books on the subject, which, we are sorry to say, promote the most improbable fantasies based on variations of the same crackpot theories Tompkins demolishes in this book. Among these theories may be included the hair-brained notion that the Great Pyramid was a 'nuclear' power station, a prophetic device to predict the future or was built by aliens.

Several chapters in the book will be of great interest to occult students, not least those which explore the many astronomical, astrological and mystical aspects of this mysterious monument, whose primary purpose was a Temple of Initiation into the ancient Mysteries, as many of our readers will know. For these reasons alone we highly recommend this book.

This rare book on the metaphysical doctrines, religion and magical practises of ancient Egypt was first published as volume VIII of Collectanea Hermetica (see Numbers: Their Occult Power and Mystic Virtues, reviewed below), in 1896. Although the book was written at a time when the science of Egyptology was in its infancy, this in no way negates the invaluable esoteric lore the author has collected from the translations of Egyptian papyri available to her in the 19th century, which remain as much of an enigma to modern scholars as they were to Egyptologists in Farr's time.

Understandably, she draws heavily on the books of E. A. Wallis Budge, now sadly out of favour among Egyptologists for reasons of political correctness rather than scholarship in which he vastly exceeded all his modern contemporaries put together. The book includes a detailed examination and discussion of reincarnation, initiation, evolution and the afterlife which is in complete accord with the true laws and principles of Occult Science as expounded in many of our articles.

Farr correctly deduced that the principles of Egyptian magic were based on an elaborate series of correspondences derived from the fact that material and spiritual evolution follow the same Hermetic law of 'As above; so below', and that matter and spirit are the opposite states of the one Universal Substance, or Prima Materia.

The book begins with a dissertation upon the seven principles of man as they were known in ancient Egypt, explaining how they enter into the body at birth, what happens to them at death, and the manner in which they are connected. Later chapters include several so-called 'spells' taken from the Book of the Dead, which are nothing of the kind, for all these exhortations and prayers are nothing more nor less than allegorical representations of the various transformations the Higher Self undergoes during life and after death.

Over half the book is taken up with extracts from a Gnostic papyrus entitled The Book of Knowledge of the Invisible God, which forms part of the Bruce codex found in Upper Egypt in 1769, and now preserved in the Bodleian Library, in Oxford. This luminous text is reminiscent of the Pistis Sophia in parts and consists of some of the esoteric teachings Jesus imparted to his disciples after his resurrection. These alone make this little book well worth studying. You can read about the hidden meaning of the resurrection in our article about the esoteric meaning of Easter.

NOTE: Amazon sell a Kindle edition for just over £2.00 but not having seen it we cannot vouch for its quality or accuracy. Kessinger Publishing produced a reprinted edition in 1993, but this may contain errors and omissions. Hence, we recommend that those on a tight budget avail themselves of the free e-text published by the Hermetic Library (see above link).

We feel compelled to begin this review with an apology. Numerology cannot be picked up piecemeal in an idle hour or two. Nor can it be used to tell 'fortunes' as many people have been led to believe. If that is your desire, we suggest that you take up reading tea-leaves or the Tarot! As we point out in our article on symbolism, the students of Pythagoras spent seven years learning the basic principles of the sacred science of numbers, as you can read in our article on numerology. Consequently, Westcott's book, like our own article, should be regarded as an introduction to this vast and complex subject, not a complete course of instruction in the science of numbers, which cannot be condensed down into a slim volume of just 120 pages.

The book was first published in 1890 as volume IX of Collectanea Hermetica, a series of 9 books on the occult sciences issued under the imprimatur of the Theosophical Society with Westcott as editor. Westcott expanded and revised the book in 1902 and 1911. A 4th edition was published in 1974, which is the edition shown at right that we have used for this review. Those who judiciously study this book will gain a first-rate understanding of the main principles of the hidden properties and meaning of numbers.

Westcott drew on an immense number of ancient Greek, Roman, Chaldean, Hebraic, Egyptian, Chinese and Sanskrit sources for this book, as well as the writings of Eliphas Levi, the Egyptologist E.A. Wallis Budge, Thomas Taylor, Godfrey Higgins, Michael Maier, Gerald Massey and H. P. Blavatsky. But Westcott's main source, and the reason that this book is of such value to the serious occult student, are the teachings of Pythagoras himself, which the author has collected together from the fragmentary remains of the writings of the Sage's pupils.

The science of numbers is one of the most important keys that unlocks the secrets of man and the universe. As H. P. Blavatsky said so truly: "Everything in the Universe was framed according to the eternal proportions and combinations of numbers—God geometrises—and numbers and numerals are the fundamental basis of all systems of mysticism, philosophy, and religion." Pythagoras stated that the Monad or unity, emanated the Dyad, and thus formed the spiritual trinity, from which is derived the quaternary, or the mystic four, the number of the material world. These numbers comprise the totality of the forces of Nature and the principles of man, both of which are seven in number.

IMPORTANT NOTE! There are several print-on-demand and Kindle editions of this book available from Amazon and other booksellers. These are best avoided as almost all are badly typeset and contain innumerable errors and omissions. If you want a printed copy our advice is to obtain the 4th edition shown above, published by the Theosophical Publishing House in 1973. Otherwise, read the free e-text at the Sacred Text Archive.

qabbalah by isaac myer
The Qabbalah (also written "Kabbalah", "Cabala", etc), which word means "doctrines received by tradition"—is a system of Jewish theosophy that played an important part in the establishment of the Christian Church. As such, it is a valuable work for the study of the origin of religions and their philosophy in general, and the origin of the formulations, dogmas and doctrines of early Christianity in particular. We would add that Isaac Meyer's book has nothing whatsoever to do with the fashionable craze of 'kabbalah' popularised by various Hollywood celebrities in recent years!

First published at the author's own expense in 1888, Meyer's Qabbalah remains the most accessible and readable summary of these important Hebrew writings that we know of. The book includes a short account of the life and writings of the philosopher, Solomon ben Yehudah Ibn Gebirol or Avicebron; some parts of the Qabbalistic philosophy, quotations from the Zoharic books, explanations of many New Testament passages, the basic element in Religions, and extracts from the so-called "Pagan" writers on the Invisible and Visible and the Ideal and Real. In addition, the book contains Qabbalistic accounts of the Creation which should be of interest to every seeker, for it is only by carefully comparing the various accounts to be found in the sacred books of all times that the diligent occult student may arrive at a true conception of the origins of Man and the Universe. The book also contains important discussions upon the nature of illusion, sound, colour and rhythm, and an interesting article on an Ancient Lodge of Initiates.

For those interested in making a deeper study of Jewish Mysticism it is important to get as close as possible to the original sources upon which the early philosophers erected the doctrine and teaching of the Kabbalah. For this reason we also recommend two further classic books on this system of Jewish theosophy. These are: The Kabbalah: its Doctrines, Development, and Literature by Christian David Ginsburg, published by G Routledge & Sons, London, 1920 and The Kabbalah or the Religious Philosophy of the Hebrews by Adolphe Franck (translated by I. Sossnitz) 1926. This latter book is available to read online in HTML format at the Internet Sacred Text Archive. We review this superb compendium of sacred and occult texts on our Links page.

NOTE. We recommend the edition published by Weiser Books in 1970/72 (ISBN 0-87728-008-8), OR the photographic reprint by Elibron Classics published by Adamant Media Corporation in 2001 (ISBN 978-1402185038). We do not recommend the Kindle and other electronic editions sold by Amazon as these often suffer from defects and imperfections that make such ebooks virtually unreadable.

occult curative powers precious stones
Although it was first published more than 100 years ago, W. T. Fernie's seminal source book on the various occult, alchemical, historical, mythological and magical lore and properties associated with precious stones and minerals has never been equalled. The book is a virtual encyclopedia of invaluable information about stones and metals, and copiously enlivened with anecdotes and historical information on how precious and semi-precious stones and metals were used in the past.

Given the present-day fascination with "crystals" and the very many uses (and we may say many more "abuses") to which they are now put, the serious student of occultism will find this book indispensable in his researches into the historical and occult lore of gems of all kinds. Having said that, the book is not without errors and should not be taken as an infallible guide to the use of precious stones for occult purposes. The real occult facts about precious stones and their employment have and always will remain a closely-guarded secret for the reasons we give in our Occult FAQ.

NOTE. The edition illustrated above is the HarperCollins paperback reprint of 1981. So far as we have been able to ascertain this is verbatim with the original edition of 1907. When we last updated this page in late November 2024, used copied of the HarperCollins reprint were readily available from Abe Books and other booksellers from £25.00 or less. The various print-on-demand editions of this book now being produced are best avoided for the reasons given in our note 'Where and how to buy occult books' in the sidebar.

OCCULT BOOKS
"Of the making of many books there is no end."

Ecclesiastes 12:12

This reminds us of a very good friend of ours, a Mystic and Seer of wide experience and great wisdom, who, when he was asked which of the many thousands of rare occult books in his library he would recommend, he said "None of 'em!!"

We agree with him. The fact of the matter is that with very few exceptions, the books which are recommended to Occult students are often chaotic in their contents and contradict one another. The problem is that it is impossible to put the most profound spiritual and mystical experiences into words that cannot be misunderstood by a large number of seekers.

We only have to consider the many different interpretations of the Bible and other Sacred books to know that this is true. We could easily have reviewed 500 occult books, or 5000, but whether acquiring that many books leads to knowledge and understanding or confusion and mental indigestion, is a question we leave our readers to ponder. . .

Moreover, in all our wide experience of occult and mystical literature, we know of no books that do not contain some errors, while in most truth and error are so inextricably intertwined that only a trained Occultist can sift the one from the other. Yet some truth is better than none. This is especially true of the thousands of new occult books that are now appearing, very few which of contain anything that has not been said better before. This answers the question we have often been asked as to why so many of the books we do review were published in the last century or even earlier.

It is for this reason that we have chosen only those books which contain real occult wisdom and truth which stand out like beacons of Light amongst a sea of mediocrity, plagiarism and fantasy. Books that explain who and what Man truly IS, whence he comes, whither he is going and the purpose and meaning of life. In connection with this, an anonymous alchemist has written:

"Let a Lover of truth suspect things that are quickly understood; for truth lies hid in obscurity; for Philosophers never write more deceitfully—than when plainly, nor ever more truly—than when obscurely."

This is true, though it may come as a shock to those who imagine there is a secret 'Da Vinci' code which at a stroke will magically 'unlock' the obscure allegories, arcane symbolism and archaic language used by occultists, mystics and philosophers. We're afraid that no such 'code' exists, has existed, or ever will exist, except in the minds of novelists and conspiracy theorists. It requires wide reading, long study, intuition and sheer hard work to discover the hidden meaning in the best occult books as we explain in our occult studies course.

Occult books for beginners

We are often asked to suggest the 'best' occult books for beginners. Our invariable answer is that the 'best' books are those that teach us the most. For this reason we suggest that if you know little or nothing about the occult sciences, you start off by reading the following three articles we have published:

Occult FAQ
Why study Occult Science?
There is only One LIGHT

Then, if you wish to learn more, The Secret Teachings of All Ages is a readable and comprehensive introduction to the occult sciences for those who know little or nothing about them. Those who prefer to read the personal experiences of seekers, should enjoy Serpents of Wisdom or The White Brother. Both these books were written by authors who drew on their own personal experience to describe the search for a genuine spiritual teacher and answer the many questions asked by beginners. These two books are reviewed on this website and can be downloaded in PDF format.

In addition, we would also recommend In Tune with the Infinite by Ralph Waldo Trine. Although not an 'occult' book in the strict sense, it presents the Eternal Truths of life with great clarity and simplicity—and just as importantly—how to apply them to improve your life, health, wealth and happiness.

astral conversations

Finally, we strongly recommend that you read and study Astral Conversations—a series of articles in which two typical occult students—one a mere beginner—discuss many different subjects and provide plain, no-nonsense answers to them. A hardcover print edition of these twelve conversations was published by Aula Lucis in 2022. This is arranged slightly differently to the website articles but the content is the same. For further information about this printed edition see our review of the book on this page.

Serpents of Wisdom

An extract adapted from the book by Edda Livingston reviewed on this page

You have probably come to the realization that there are no listings of Masters and true Teachers in the Yellow Pages. It is possible to find psychics, astrologers, and other such flora and fauna, and you may even find advertisements in metaphysical-type magazines for birds of ill-omen who call themselves masters, but unless we have polyps for brains, we ought to know that the only thing they are masters of, is deceit of an expensive kind.

The ill-advised followers of these self-appointed teachers, swallow wholesale the most absurd propositions put forward by these coolies of the Occult; these poachers on Spiritual grounds. But is there a single Master among them? An Adept, perhaps? Or an Initiate? The sad but true answer is NO—not one. There is not even a good imitation of one.

So where will you find one?

Do you think you would recognize a Master if you did meet one? Are you under the impression that he would advertise his Mastership by wearing saffron robes? Flowing locks? Sandals? A halo? A crown of thorns? Or could it possibly be that he is so well hidden because he looks like any one of us, giving us no obvious signs to recognize him by, and, in this manner, throwing us back on our ability to tell Truth from falsehood? How many of us are willing or able to know and welcome Mastership or Adeptship by listening to words of Truth? The majority seem to prefer personality, fame, and drivellers of ineptitude who reconfirms our preconceived opinions.

And anyway, to the ordinary man, all that stuff about Masters, Wisdom, Light and Love, has no meaning—it makes him yawn. What matters to him is profit, the latest football scores, fun, food, and lots of sleep. If you talk to this kind of plebeian about the more elevated things—things of the Spirit and of the Higher man, he will probably brush you aside with: 'In my opinion, that's a lot of bull.' and it will be your own fault for thoughtlessly throwing your pearls before the swine. Your hard gained pearls of wisdom will be trampled underfoot, and neither you nor the plebeian you sought to enlighten will have gained a thing by your eagerness to share your new-found Light. Regretfully, you will soon learn that most men shun the light like so many vampires hiding in their coffins as soon as the sun comes out.

The 19th Century occultist, Eliphas Levi said that: "Fools are the people who kill men of genius", and we might add that they are also fond of killing the Messengers sent to us from God. We all know what crass humanity did to Jesus. Apollonius of Tyana was thrown into prison and later tortured to death; Daniel was thrown to the lions; Raymund Lully was stoned to death; Joan of Arc was burnt at the stake; Ibn Gebirol, the Kabbalist, was murdered; Jaques Cazotte, the seer, was executed, and Socrates was condemned to death. Pythagoras had to flee from the tyranny of Polycrates. Cagliostro died while confined in prison; Giordano Bruno was burnt alive; Sendivogius was imprisoned and tortured; Paracelsus and Agrippa were forced to spend their lives as wretched wanderers. . . and the list goes on.

You may argue that all this took place a long time ago, that we are more civilized these days and would never tolerate such barbaric behaviour. Don't believe it! Human nature does not change much, and however arrogant and self-satisfied modern man is concerning his latest achievements and so-called progress, he is still as stupid and as cruel as ever. Fools are still persecuting and killing messengers, whether physically or by ridicule and calumny, who irritate them, or who hold views considered threatening.

This is one of the reasons why the Wise keep silent as to who, what and where they are—and maybe—to a lesser extent, so should you. It is also wrong to foist your beliefs on others who may be at a different stage on the Path than yourself; or who may simply be going by a different route. Since it is only possible for us to understand something up to our own level, how would we know if we were foisting ourselves and our beliefs on those who have far surpassed us in knowledge and Wisdom? And yet, people do all the time, unaware of the pitying and gentle smiles of those who can see through them.

And although you should always protect the fellow traveller lower than yourself on the ladder to the Light, you must at all times guard against being preached at or dictated to by them. As for the majority, those who care not, let them go on their merry way, without judging them, but at the same time make sure that you see them for what they are, freeing you from the danger of falling for outward trappings.

But if the opportunity to plant a seed in their barren soils presents itself, you should do so. A good seed may lay dormant until the experiences of their lives has watered their soil with tears and enriched it with the ashes of their dreams, sprouting into a beautiful flower of wisdom, years—or lifetimes hence.

It is possible that you yourself are on the Path because someone, at some time, planted a seed in you. A kind soul did the work of the Master on your behalf and you are now reaping the benefits of that kindly act. This is the Way of Service and it is the only Path you can take if you want to reach one of the Masters.

There are no short-cuts to be had on the Path to the Light. We all have to travel the same road and overcome the same obstacles in order to obtain our Goal, and only the strong and steadfast, the loving and faithful, will be crowned with success. Let us at all times remember that even the Masters had to travel along this Path in times gone by, and for this reason they understand fully our aching hearts and our yearnings, but they also know that the Reward is well worth striving for. They know that it is necessary for man to live through material darkness, for we can only be born into the Light from this darkness. But before we start longing for this Birth, we must reach a point where we feel the limitations and the powerlessness of the darkness. We must long, with our whole hearts and minds, to live within the rays of the Light, and we must fearlessly face the Truth. If the Truth hurts, we must have the ability to look within ourselves for the fault, rather than change the Truth in order to spare ourselves.

Then, and only then, can we hope to be noticed by the Masters who live within the Light.

Upanishads

An abstract adapted from Juan Mascaro's introduction to his translations of the Upanishads (see book review at left)

If all the known Upanishads were collected into one volume, they would make an anthology about the length of the Bible. The spirit of the Upanishads can be compared with that of the New Testament summed up in the words 'I and my Father are one' and 'The kingdom of God is within you', the seed of which is found in the words of the Psalms 'I have said: Ye are gods; and all of you are the children of the most High'.

The central message of the Upanishads is that God must not be sought as something far away, abstract, and separate from us, but rather within us in the Higher Self which transcends the limitations and littleness of our earthly personality. In rising to the best in us we rise to the Higher Self in us and to God Himself. Thus when the sage of the Upanishads is pressed for a definition of God, he remains silent, meaning that God is silence. When asked again to express God in words, he says: 'Neti, neti', 'Not this, not this'; but when pressed for a positive explanation he utters the sublimely simple words: 'TAT TVAM ASI', 'Thou art That'.

According to the Upanishads, the reality of God can only be apprehended in a consciousness of joy that is beyond ordinary consciousness. The silent voice of the Eternal is perpetually whispering in us his melodies everlasting. The radiance of the Infinite is everywhere, but our ears cannot hear and our eyes cannot see: the Eternal cannot be grasped by the transient physical senses or the transient material mind. This is beautifully expressed in the Taittiriya Upanishad: 'Words and mind go to him, but reach him not and return. But he who knows the joy of Brahman fears no more.'

Brahman is described as immanent and transcendent, within all and outside all. If the All is imagined as a triangle, the apex might be imagined as God transcendent, who in his expansion creates matter out of Himself—not out of nothing as science believes—and thus becomes immanent until the end of evolution when the immanent has once again become transcendent in the ascension of evolution towards Him. Why? For the joy of creation. Why is there evil? For the joy of good arising from it. Why suffering? For the instruction of the Higher and lower self. Why darkness? That the Light may shine the more brightly and gloriously. This teaching is as old as man and the very essence of true Occult Science.

The Upanishads introduce the reader to the conception of a fourth state of consciousness, above waking, dreaming and deep sleep. The law of attunement, wrongly called Karma—which we discuss in our study course—explains the apparent injustice in the world with sublime simplicity. We alone are the builders of our own destiny, and the results are not limited to one life, since our Higher Self that was never born and will never die must come again and take to itself a fresh body, that both selves may have the reward of their works. Good shall lead to good, and evil to evil. From good, joy shall come, and from evil shall come suffering. And thus the grand scheme of evolution flows on towards perfection.

And when all the transient has been left behind, when final liberation has been attained, when our little self is lost in the greater Self in us and in the ALL, as a drop of water is lost in the sea, does it mean that all consciousness is lost? After the death of the lower self, when the small drop of human consciousness has become one with the vast ocean of Consciousness, does it mean that our individual consciousness is lost? Yes, say some spiritual teachers, both past and present but they err and err profoundly as you can read in our astral conversation on consciousness after death. The truth, as you may read in that article, is that the Higher Self gathers the spiritual qualities of every terrestrial personality into which it incarnates and adds them to its own eternal consciousness.

The Higher Self has then become the Self supreme and not only has it full consciousness of its own experience through its many incarnations, but access to the consciousness of all other selves too. How could the union with God be unconsciousness, unless God Himself was unconsciousness? We all know that caterpillars die in order to transform themselves into beautiful butterflies. Free from its limitations, the little self forgets its limited life in the boundless ocean of life. It is not a death, but a victory over death, a rising and a resurrection to greater and more vivid life.

This is the central message of the Upanishads and why we commend the book to you for serious study and meditation.

NOTE: Juan Mascaro translated portions of several other Indian sacred texts during his lifetime. Foremost among them are the Bhagavad Gita (1962) and the Dhammapada (1973). Both are well worth reading.

Where and how to buy occult books

The occult books we have reviewed have been carefully selected as the best of their kind. We could easily have included many more books which are both scarce and expensive, but being aware of the fact that most sincere seekers have limited means we have favoured those that are free to read online, and/or are readily available in several editions and formats, both new and second-hand, at modest cost.

BUYERS BEWARE!
And now we must issue a strong warning. Whilst Information Technology and the Internet have vastly increased the availability of rare and/or out-of-print books, it has also made buying definitive editions very much harder.

Such books are increasingly being digitally-scanned and published as print-on-demand or e-books. Whilst some are well-reproduced, accurate facsimiles of the original editions, the majority are not. Many are incomplete and contain serious errors and omissions, and in the worst cases, may be completely unreadable.

Notwithstanding these grave shortcomings, such reprints are often prohibitively expensive, so adding insult to injury whilst providing a jolly good income for the publisher! The latter is usually a 'one-man-band' whose sole interest is in making a fast buck from the unsuspecting.

The only way to be sure you are not paying good money for waste paper is to buy the specific edition we recommend, or if that is not possible, contact the publisher or seller to make sure that the book they are selling is an exact facsimile of the original with no errors or omissions.

We have indicated below where to obtain the occult books we have reviewed, but this information is subject to change as titles go in and out of print and/or stock and web links are updated. In most cases a web search will return results from various sellers, and it is also worthwhile contacting booksellers directly.

Don't rely on booksellers' online lists of titles in stock as these are often out-of-date. Do try charity shops, as these often stock rare or unusual books at bargain prices. You will find a short list of booksellers specialising in occult books in the UK and some in the USA below.

Occult booksellers and publishers
Whilst we try to keep this list up-to-date, these websites may become unavailable at any time
Abe books is a major seller of second-hand books but delivery can be slow and customer service rather poor.
Atlantis Bookshop is London's oldest independent occult bookseller established in 1922. Unfortunately, they now seem to focus mainly on books about black magic and witchcraft, do not list their current stock, and provide no search facilities.
Magis Books—mail-order bookseller based in Leicestershire, in the UK. Although their website is awkward and frustrating to use, it does list their current stock and provides a search facility by title, author and category.

Treadwell's Books located in Bloomsbury, in London, sells books on occultism, mythology, folklore and religion. Like the Atlantis Bookshop, Treadwell's favour books on witchcraft and black magic rather than the Ancient Wisdom and Occult Truth.
Courtyard Books based in Glastonbury, sells esoteric and occult books including fine, limited edition titles in hardcover from small publishers and private presses. Their website is easy to use with a good search facility.
Watkins Books—esoteric bookshop in London, established over 100 years ago. Watkins have an extensive list of books on philosophy, metaphysics, mythology, the occult sciences, astrology, magic and mysticism, both new and second-hand, including rare and out-of-print classics.
Wizards Bookshelf—mail-order publisher and bookseller based in Michigan, USA, publishes high quality reprints of many scarce metaphysical classics, such as The Divine Pymander of Hermes Trismegistus, Anna Kingsford and Edward Maitland's translation of The Virgin of the World, On the Mysteries of the Egyptians, Chaldeans and Assyrians by Iamblichus, and many of the books referred to by H. P. Blavatsky in her master-work, The Secret Doctrine.

I got this last week and started chipping away slowly at all the content. It's amazing.

It took awhile for me to download the whole thing since there weren't many seeders, or maybe my ISP didn't want me looking at such powerful documents. ;)

I urge you not to violate the intellectual property of others, especially occult authors. I learned the hard way on this one. Please don't make the same mistake I did and think its ok to make a copy of someone elses IP.

Hmm. How exactly did you learn? You can't just drop something like that and then not elaborate :P

I have it on good source that some authors use Enochian angels. That shit is even worse than the MPAA ;)

Seriously, I have it too. It's awesome. Please seed. And please BUY SOME BOOKS from the author you like, writing occult book is a business in which you hardly break even, so support the authors you like.

Edit: See Robert A Wilson for example? A superstar if there was one. Does anyone remember his death? Guy had to sell his Thoth cards one by one to raise a bit of money for his medical expense. When word got out, everyone sent him 23$ so he could die at home with his family.

Tear jerking story, yes. But not everyone is Bob Wilson.

so you can piece them out one by one which would be a decent amount of work but will net you the best profit. or you can try to sell them in a lot, which means you may miss out on a really great find, but you don't have to put very much work into selling them.

Dude, how does someone do this. I would love to have a collection of antique esoteric and occult books. But how the fuck do you start. What are the resources? I'm not johnny depp from the ninth gate, I'm not in the bibliophile world. But I can definitely be thoroughly unscrupulous.

Antique shops are usually a good bet.

EBay, other online book stores.

There’s a lot out there - it’s just a case of digging sometimes to find the right stuff 😊

I run a bookstore that deals in a lot of esoteric books. eBay is your best bet if you're looking to sell them quick. eBay sold listings are your friend for valuation. Blavatsky and Crowley are always good sellers. A shortcut for identifying which books are worth looking up is going to be identifying publishers and key words that indicate more valuable books- that will save you a lot of time.

Old esoteric books are cool. But as far as I can tell those are not particularly popular. Maybe Heinfel is decent. But out of 409 I'm sure there are some good ones.

Shakti, and the joy of our natural state
Hello all,

I'm relatively new to Singer's teachings, but after coming from a few years of studying and following Eckhart Tolle's teachings quite a bit, I came across Mickey and felt he was a great compliment to Tolle's stuff. I've read Untethered Soul, and have binged nearly all of his podcasts - almost current! This stuff seems great, and quite a practical approach to applying deep teachings to daily life.

My question for discussion is along the lines of Shakti. I love this term, and the analogies to a stream of Shakti energy being blocked with our stuff, that, if removed, it can flow freely and lift us up. However, I don't feel like I've had the direct experience yet, so was hoping from some insight or discussion from the community.

Through both Tolle and Singer, when in meditation, I can get to a state of stillness and peace, and it's a practice. But I haven't experienced the intense joy/love/ecstasy, or Shakti, flowing through me like Singer often talks about. Has anyone here gone that far?

As always, I would love advice or insight, and any further practice suggestions, mediations or otherwise!

Thank you.

One piece of advice I might give is to not focus so much on the extremes of bliss that we hear about. Instead, see if you can just start to notice a feeling of well-being in your body and mind. E.g. notice that it feels good when you relax and release. That is the trickle of bliss that one day may become a torrent. If you keep looking for fireworks, you’re going to miss the bliss that is there. Remember, what you focus on grows stronger.

Needed to hear this. What we focus our consciousness on ultimately becomes our reality.

I would say that chances are you have actually felt this sometime in your life but just didn't recognize it as Shakti. Recall a time in your life, even if only for a few moments - minutes or hours, where you felt almost overwhelmed with love or joy or fulfillment.

I infrequently have brief moments of a warm fuzzy feeling starting in my core and it radiates outwards to giving me goosebumps. I relate this to an outpouring of love from my heart. This is only as of the last year when the teachings/book actually hit home for me. Before that time I can’t remember the last time I had felt the feeling I’m describing. This, for me, I believe is a small sample of my inner Shakti flowing up and out. It’s hard to recall but I relate these episodes to when I come to brief realizations of how much I’m loved by my immediate family (wife and 2 young kids) or how fortunate I am to be in my position as a human being. It has occurred during meditation, driving my car and a couple other random times while not doing anything specific to envoke it. It really is a beautiful thing and very spiritual.

Good luck on your journey.

How strong it is can vary. I have experienced it, but haven't been able to maintain it. In some cases it felt more blissful whereas in other times, it felt more energetic but less of the bliss aspect. 🤔 I'm currently working on cultivating this experience more.

Can I ask what you do to cultivate it? The general teachings of just letting go I’m sure, but I guess I’m curious if you find any meditation practices that you like this singer might not teach as well.

I go see Mickey regularly since I am nearby. He often talks about letting go of our preferences and various forms of conditioning. In my case, I am doing a lot of therapy and going to a support group where we focus on recognizing and then letting go of past trauma. I'm doing a lot of reparenting and inner child work.i also do a lot of spiritual baths and listen to Mickey's talks online.

I had an experience about 2 months ago in meditation (I don't usually meditate, but I felt like it that day after yoga) that I typed into Chat GPT and it essentially said it was the kundalini energy being awakened, the Shakti thing he talks about. It was remarkable, and has removed all skepticism for me. I had a decade of yoga (mainly just asanas) under my belt and was still skeptical and didn't really understand things like chakras, but now I completely understand what they mean. For a couple of days after that I felt the energy occasionally pop up. I actually emailed Michael Singer's receptionist about it because I didn't know what to do and was a little bit afraid (from what I hear of kundalini stuff it can change a lot drastically)and they said just to continue with the practice of relaxing/releasing and that drastic changes won't happen, that any energetic changes would be gentle (which is what I want), they discouraged trying to reach any states or return back to it... and I agree, I think we miss the point when we focus on the outcome and it detracts us from the practice. I read this book back in 2017, but didn't earnestly practice releasing feelings it until 6 months ago. The motivation to practice came from feeling fed up with my own BS. I realised that I feel my emotions anyway and at least this way it would make me a little bit more free each time. It's such a worthwhile practice, it has changed my life. I used to identify heavily with being an anxious person, and now I don't feel any anxiety at all. Only in small moments where maybe something warranted the stress, but then it goes away. All the best on your journey! It's worth it

From what I can see it could be a variant of thaumaturgy which mean making miracles, maybe the Boiling Isles equivalent is darker compared to what you expect from miracle magic.

Theurgy and thaumaturgy are related, but theurgy relates to magic related to divine powers, whereas thaumaturgy relates to occult. Since the titans are the closest things to gods in this world (archivists notwithstanding), I'd venture a guess to say that titan-based glyph magic/demon magic would be theurgy, whereas thaumaturgy would be…well, a bile sac isn't exactly occult. Buuuuuut that's just a human word, maybe it is just literally the other kind of magic? Demon magic vs witch magic. Maybe just a typo, but my theory is that it might be a theory class about combining both types of magic, which would really be the most wild of wild magic.

Is summoning the Ars Goetia difficult?
I've been interested for awhile now in summoning the Goetia Demons, specifically Stolas. There's mixed reviews from what Ive seen so my question is,

Is it really as simple as drawing his sigil with white chalk and invoking his name or is there more to it?

I don't do Goetia stuff specifically, but speaking in general this isn't exactly how it works. Person A may struggle to practice with an entity that Person B very easily has powerful experiences with, and Person B may struggle with a different entity that Person A contacts easily. Then Person C may not be able to contact either of those entities at all, but they can practice just fine with something else.

So the question really becomes "is summoning the Goetia difficult for me?" and that's not something anyone can answer. All you can do is try it, and change up your methods a few times if the first time doesn't cut it but you're still interested. Good luck; I wish you the best.

Not specifically difficult, but needing real focus, background and certain implements, to be of any real use.

There are a lot of "lazy" techniques, that really don't work.

Read the sourcebook, "Lesser Key of Solomon," for the real experience. Been using it for decades.

Np if you are new to ceremonial magic I would suggest starting with a David Rankine book here
https://us.amazon.com/Claves-Intelligentiarum-Practical-Conjuration-Intelligences-ebook/dp/B0F6CZWHV8/ref=mp_s_a_1_1?crid=T5YRZ5H2U1SJ&dib=eyJ2IjoiMSJ9.xcLOxUfxIUuePtt9W6fJ7YWjZFvKa2MT0G8C9tLD8es_9lIp4C81cQyQqTcyMhHr6muWv9v_Pa2Jo4IvIRKwEGf2bFM6RnrCjhrqA6PNdmzrxCkNFSRG-EI2N64qknuqV69YOrufPbLq3y6K5BiRsxc_wXX2K4K68erDZIx2xRhSh33R_8P8Fk0x5t-mb3jPZtAWdEMuRJtIPvhglS8wPg.k0Dl9KW52-r6QN0pscgRVWhWh4omwvkpujX9n8L6qtA&dib_tag=se&keywords=david+rankine&qid=1765846527&s=digital-text&sprefix=david+rank%2Cdigital-text%2C165&sr=1-1

This not affiliate link please don’t think you have to buy it through this link I just copy and paste it to make it easy. He also has a follow up book to this published recently as well.

I recently read Modern Demonolatry and it specifically focuses on stripping away the "bells and whistles" from the original grimoirs and only doing what is strictly necessary for success.

I won't bore you with technicalities, but suffice to say that the most powerful and essential instrument is YOU. Rituals are meant to help channel your abilities. But if you haven't actually practiced or developed any, then following everything to a T and having your chalice be pure gold with all the names engraved by a pure maiden won't do jack shit.

Very experienced practitioners can do itemless, wordless evocations.

If you want examples of what "preparation" means:

-tuning in to the sigil. Days, weeks, or even months ahead you should start drawing the sigil and meditating on it. Learn every curve. Place it in all sorts of places. Be able to quickly and accurately draw. Be able to close your eyes and fully visualise it.

-performing the chod rite.

-studying correspondances and offering the entity appropriate things

You can't summon the ars goetia unless you order it from amazon. But you can summon goetic spirits (or demons if you prefer) featured in the ars goetia. /s but to answer you seriously, I personally don’t use any fancy summoning ritual for my patron. I just call out to her when in front of my altar or meditating…or whenever i feel the need.

But you might find more info on r/DemonolatryPractices

Of course, it’s not just I drew it and that’s it. It depends on your energy. If your energies are aligned, it becomes easier for the entity to come. If you are strong, it becomes easier. Or if it wants to come, it becomes easier.

And, at least in the beginning, I suggest you evoke it, unless you are a Satanist.

... If you read the Grimoires, it's not supposed to be easy - at all. So, the Ars Goetia is a piece of a branch of magic called Solomonic Magic, the most ritually intensive branch of magick I know, personally.

That said, as a Chaos Witch myself, it doesn't HAVE to be hard. It's just not guaranteed to work at all if you don't do ALL the stuff involved. Very much like torrenting cracked software. You can TECHNICALLY download an illegal copy of Photoshop, and it is always morally ethical to do so imo, but if you torrent Photoshop the chance of giving your computer aids is very likely.

Therefore, you CAN free wheel summoning Goetic demons. You CAN get free stuff by dialing up President Volac without protection or whatever or a robe at Midnight, but the chance of Volac using the fact that you're spiritually waving your bare ass at him to kick your ass for waking him up while he's mid coitous is entirely on you.

Goetic spirits are basically demonic people, OP. From personal experience, any of the goetic spirits can definitely tell you to go fuck yourself. Source? Gremorry told me to fuck off and never summon her again - ever.

On the flip side, Duchess Bune and not goetic but on a similar side, Dark Mother Lilith, love me. My goth dommy mommy demons are bad ass girl bosses, but again, YMMV. Be careful. _^

Has anyone here read stuff from Manly P. Hall?
What books would you recommend of his and what have you learnt from him? I have his Pineal Gland book and found that super fascinating. I know Secret Teachings is meant to be his magnus opus, so I might get that, but not sure about some of his other books. Which ones are worth reading?

Manly P. Hall's works are all worth reading and he has some truly beautiful gems of truth in his works yet quite ironically he has a rather strained relationship with truth especially in secret teachings of all ages. He fabricated some of it and came to regret it in his later years. Yet with all good lies there's a sprinkling of truth and his was quite profound

Absolutely read it but just keep in mind it is not 100% accurate

Whatever you do don't find a online site like library genesis, Z library or Annes Archive and search his name for access to all his published works. You'll be taking money from predatory publishing services like Amazon.

If you know how to torrent, myanonamouse is the best for ebooks and audiobooks. There's a bit of rigamarole to sign up but it is worth it. If it isn't on Anna's Archive, it's probably on MAM.

Also, apps like elevenreader are free and can be used to turn any ebook into an audiobook.

Librivox is a good source of public domain audiobooks, of which a number of Manly P Hall's works are included.

Don't forget to check out Libby for free library sources (e and audio), they're great!

The one I recommend most is Self-Unfoldment through Disciplines of Realization, Hall's manual of meditation training. It's a really solid guide to spiritual development. Many of his pamphlets are little gems of occult instruction. Secret Teachings, by contrast, is a very early work -- I know it's popular, but to my mind it's far from his best.

"What the Ancient Wisdom Expects of its Disciples" is okay.

Overall he isn't a good writer and uses very little primary sources while often mostly going off of romantic conjecture while not offering much more than writers that have actually done esoteric work. You'll notice he fails to provide sources for pretty much anything he says. Most of his descriptions and knowledge of things are practically meme level. I would recommend looking elsewhere unless you are just reading for entertainment purposes.

And that’s my problem with M.P. Hall, Blavatsky and theosophy as a whole. I, personally, see little distinction between them and Allan Kardec or Joseph Smith. There’s an intrinsic esoteric/occult pool from which a general canvas is constructed but the means and whys of their work is very much a self developed interpretation of conceptualized topics that don’t necessarily connect with each other but are made to in some manner. The seriousness with which each of them presented their work and ideas was the way they found to validate their takes. I respect their trajectory and boldness in that period and time but I think they were “supplanted” by the esoteric works from the last half century.

Let me come at Manly Hall's works and influence from a bookseller's perspective.

Hall, over his 70 year career, published some 150 works. But the one that's most likely to be shelved in a bookstore is The Secret Teachings of All Ages. It's the book that made his reputation, and, by virtue of being in print since 1928 across a host of editions, sustains it still. Plus, it sells well enough to hold a space on bookstore shelves.

As a bookseller, it's a book that I point to as a pretty good general overview of a good deal of occulture known in history. That's right there on the bookshelf. Readers taking their first steps into occulture will know more about a bunch of topics than they did before reading this book. At $20, the illustrated paperback is a good buy for what a reader gets.

But going ahead with investigating occulture, other books by Hall, as well as other books by a variety of other authors, might prove more useful or informative. Occulture is a big subject, after all.

Checking the publication background of Secret Teachings for this post, I discovered an interesting title in this category--The Seeker's Guide to The Secret Teachings of All Ages: The Authorized Companion to Manly P. Hall's Esoteric Landmark by Mitch Horowitz that came out in 2020.

Project AngelBook – Volume X – Parts 1–36

By Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough

This volume is not made up of my own words.There is no original commentary
here, no narrative, no analysis.This is simply me copying and pasting large chunks of text from my bookmarks—pages that were easy to extract, with no hyperlinks or formatting issues, saved from open tabs and archived corners of the web.
It's messy. It's unfiltered. It's chaotic.But it's valuable.
Each piece inside this volume was bookmarked for a reason.Not always because I agreed with it, but because it felt like a fragment of something larger—an insight, a worldview, a download.This is source material, plain and raw.
Fragmenta Ex Machina isn't about authorship.It's about preservation and system-building.It's about feeding the machine—laying bricks for the Operating System I'm constructing across these books.This is the raw intake phase. The memory dump. The zero layer.
Later volumes will be cleaner, more refined, more structured.But this? This is the foundation. The ether stream, bound and frozen before it vanished.
So if you're looking for polished prose, skip this one.But if you're here to explore the roots of something much bigger, this is where the signal begins.
Welcome to the fragments.

Yup. Let the hoarding of the tomes begin. Keep on circulating the tapes.

Aye Aye! I am very thankful those were released. They are not only important to the current state of the OTO but for Thelemic history as well. To those unaware of what we are speaking of check out the links in my comment and within the “view all“ screen search for: The Temple of Solomon the King/A.'. A.'. Expanded, Organized, and Revised by a Student of the System/Libri/State of the Caliphate OTO/

While I have not released any public version of it yet my version of this ZIP has been greatly expanded upon and modified from the original (added a ton from various other Orders and traditions, got rid of duplicate files, made i easier to navigate etc) and while it is still a Work in progress I will eventually be posting it up online. This collection is not bad but it is a little outdated and lacks certain things (such as a full Masonic library, a backup of various OTO websites, a backup of various A∴A∴ websites, a backup of Parareligion etc etc).

It is my hope that the hacking of The Internet Archive and their WaybackMachine alerted the general public across all fields (esoteric and exoteric) just how much is only available because of this one service. Likely 50% or more of Wikipedia‘s citations lead to WaybackMachine links of achieved websites. I have spent countless days backing up as much Thelemic history as I can be that old Geocities posts n conversations or OTO n A∴A∴ website posts as well as interactions here on Reddit or within Discord [where appropriate I censor names and genuinely do my best to make obvious my intentions which are preservation and promulgation (not necessarily of Crowley‘s ideas but the manifold ideas of those his Work influenced whether directly or indirectly)

1 PDF read is worth 10,000 stored

1y ago
Absolutely. Not that I think you were advocating against it but for the sake of the thread here are multiple reasons to have a few thousand PDFs stored:

1: While reading something lets say about the Ruach and you use the search function on your computer to search [contains “ruach“] a few dozen results appear which you can use to compare and contrast (especially useful for comparing traditions)
2: Preservation. The internet is not as we were told as kids “forever“ and a sad amount of Thelemic and esoteric history has been lost already due to poor preservation. The Internet Archive is not only in serious legal trouble but was recently hacked and went down entirely. I strongly advocate for everyone building their own digital library with multiple redundancies

3: Figuring out what clicks with you and what does not. There are many books that jive with others that don‘t jive with me and vice versa. Libraries like this allow me to taste test books and then buy physical and support the authors if that is a possibility.
4: Learning discipline. Every website nowadays has an infinite scroll function which does no one any favours... except teaching those who are capable of being diligent in how they interact with what is online. I read a book or a PDF or listen to an audiobook 3-5 hours per day but a few years ago I would do little more than skim collections.
5: Offline research capabilities. Using the search like I mentioned in 1 with all the stuff I have added to my Library (everything from physics textbooks to Mesopotamian history to medieval monoglyphs to entire websites, encyclopedias etc I can confidently carry out complex research without internet whenever I please so long as I have either my phone (with USB dongle) or my laptop.

[NOTE] Edit Comment: Some have said certain links within the “view all“ of the ZIP are not working. This may be because the website is still recovering from the hack. My apologies, I thought they had fully recovered when I made the post. Internet Archive should have those files operating again soon. In the meantime you can use the torrent link and rather than download the whole torrent use your torrent client‘s file selector.

Original comment: The Temple of Solomon The King Collection (first link goes to the “view all“ screen, the one you see in the attached image, of the zip file... go with this one if you want to pick and choose what you want to download rather than downloading the whole 50GB+ ZIP but if you want the whole zip just go to the 2nd link below):

https://ia803206.us.archive.org/view_archive.php?archive=/23/items/thetempleofsolomontheking_202006/The%20Temple%20of%20Solomon%20the%20King.zip

https://archive.org/download/thetempleofsolomontheking_202006 (this will lead to the repository‘s main page where you can click on the .zip for the download or the torrent if you want to try to torrent it (seed as you Will)

Absolutely beautiful.

So right now I happen to be moving and I started a library of notes I have, old and new, occult or otherwise, because I really gotta not cart around a million paper notebooks and actual books with me.

I was also thinking of virtualizing my books and notes because of some other logistical reasons. My husband was telling me to back it all up to flash drives and mobile devices and the cloud and such and that's been eating some of my spare time….

And as I'm slowly building that library and transcribing notes and finding old books from ages ago…….you beautiful bastard, you drop this. It even has some stuff I had to sell because I simply don't have the ability to house the hard copies anymore.

In the words of Keanu Reeves, you're breathtaking!

Until there's a blackout. I'd rather try and get a library in order before then so you can actually read if it does… that’s probably how stuff was lost before to be honest.

Also, for the price of it, the Sacred-Text archives is an entire esoteric library that contains almost everything thelemic published.. I have the flash drive so if there’s no internet but electricity, at least could be read, but like my first part it’s nice to have actual paper.

i'm not a believer in karma, but i do believe in bad energy. i'm a broke witch, and a lot of amazing works of literature are available on torrenting sites. bad energy to get them from there?
the reason i ask this, is because i cannot afford most amazing and recommended works of literature and spell books that i find through this subreddit, but i have found that many of them are available to download through websites that allow you to download them for free. i am weary of doing so because i genuinely do not want to bring in any bad energy, and some see this as stealing since the author/artist does not receiving payment for this obviously.

years ago, i had a friend who stole a tarot deck from barnes and noble. granted, its a big box store and i always say that if you're gonna steal, do it from big corporations and never from small businesses. but still, stealing a tarot deck? he did a reading for me once and the energy i felt while he did was heavy and uncomfortable.

so i guess what i'm asking is, what do y'all think? do you see this as stealing?

Came to say this. And if you can’t find it in print, check the ebook catalog. My library uses Libby and Hoopla. I can usually find what I’m looking for in at least 1 of the 3 including audiobooks. Often I find something I wasn’t looking for!

I'm sure I wasn't perfect, I probably missed something. It was only a few series, but it felt good to eventually give money to the creators of the things that I enjoyed

Also, all the warnings about torrenting stuff are totally valid and you should always check your local library first.

I personally wouldn't do it, but I know people who would and I'm not gonna look down on you for doing it. At least it's not as bad as buying a counterfeit tarot deck because the environment is harmed to create a physical product. Does your nearest library not have any spiritual or witchcraft books to rent?

Also, the B&N nearest me has put all their tarot and oracle decks behind the counter now because people kept stealing them. Now I'm not able physically hold and go through the decks to get their vibe without being forced to bother someone working who's trying to do other things while I'm squinting at decks trying to read what they are..... Yes, I'm salty about it lol

Okay I'm a blogger so I'm going to tell you this.. (no I don't write about witchcraft) anyway, there are hundreds of witchcraft blogs out there. Many of them don't care if you buy anything or not because we make our money when you scroll past the ads. So feel free to go to any witchcraft blog and subscribe to their email lists follow them on Facebook or Pinterest or Instagram or Twitter or whatever!

Follow them and read what they have to say. Pinterest is great because you can find hundreds of blogs by just searching candle spell or something like that. So go check out blogs because they want you there. They want you to read their stuff. A lot of them have free downloads like cheat sheets. And they get paid by the ad networks so you are contributing just by reading and they are offering this information freely.

It's not bad energy spiritually to use such sites. However it is risky. So many sites get shut down and mirrors of them pop up, there is the risky of finding the wrong ones and downloading a bad file.

And there is the ethical side of the writer not getting paid.

However many authors have in the past had willingly issued copies of their books for free and so some of those copies may end up on such sites. And there is the cost factor in authors who no longer have a book that is still in print and so finding physical copy that is affordable is next to impossible.

It's on your shoulders to use such sites or not.

I see the library and Libby being mentioned already so I’m gonna toss out Thrift Books too. Yes, it’s still purchasing but maybe you’ll find something in your price range. Or something more reasonable to save for.

I’m in the process of writing my own book and know several authors. I would suggest not stealing. Simply because most authors in witchcraft are small time folks, they deserve to be compensated for their work.

An alternative might be finding if said author has a donation link somewhere? Send them whatever it is you can afford?

I think witchcraft belongs to everyone and I would joyfully share my skills and knowledge for free. Except I need to eat, ya know?

I'd suggest trying to find options like a thrift store, or library may offer some better means of procuring the books, even if for a short while. Torrent sites can have questionable downloads and it would suck to download a virus that kills your computer when you don't have the money to fix it.

Of course the obvious thing, as people are saying, is to use the library or the Libby app. Or maybe even support your local used bookstore. I will say this as an author, if youre gonna pirate books (and I get why some people do)…at least leave a nice review or recommend it to a friend! That does help to even the score a bit.

I was taught one mustn't haggle or bargain for anything you mean to use for magic, but traditionally stealing outright is technically fine, so long as you don't get caught. Mercury ☿ is a god of magic and a god of thieves.

Witchcraft sides with the underdog against the high and mighty. You're fine torrenting books to learn from There are also many, many, many classics in the public domain on various esoteric archives.

The only thing I caution against with torrented occult books is that some internet bad actors will edit ebook pdfs for upload to torrent and free library sites, especially books on the occult, to include their own agendas.

Make sure you download a few different versions for comparison.

My general rule is that if the author is both a) still alive and b) not an asshat I'll try to buy the book... For everything else there's piracy.

To everyone saying "the library is free", libraries are limited to the books they possess in their collections. Even if you're able to have them bring a book in from an outside library, you're still limited to books within that particular library system. Witchcraft and the occult are enormous topics spanning thousands of years across all cultures and continents and the average library's theology section is painfully limited (both by acquisitions budgets and by good old Dewey himself who did anything other than Christian apologetics a disservice in the cataloging system). Depending on the book OP is looking for, some occult texts have limited copies and can run in the thousands of dollars. Your only chance at reading one might be hoping someone, somewhere scanned and uploaded it.

I love thrift stores, thrift books (website), for finding new-to-me books. I like library book sales.
I love the library. Talk to the local librarians!
You can also see if anyone is interested in giving away/ reselling old books that don't for their practice anymore. (Facebook marketplace, fb groups, paperback swap sites, etc)

I would just trust your gut tbh on what feels right for you. I read tarot but went to a reader once who had mostly good reviews to get more experienced insight. I felt scammed cause I could tell she was making up stuff about my situation to worry me, trying to get me to pay hundreds for her additional "cleansing services", especially because she wouldn't disclose what it actually entailed and "wouldnt be able to show the work". As if I'm gonna give money to someone blindly and not see any proof of materials or rituals I'm paying for. I didn't leave a bad review like I wanted to cause my gut told me not to piss off a fellow witchy person lol maybe others were too scared to leave bad reviews too.

Will God Forgive Me for Practicing Witchcraft and Other Occult Practices
I would like to know if God will forgive me for practicing witchcraft and other occult practices here and there the past 3 years or even longer than that. i have been a christian my whole life (mostly lukewarm unfortunately) and i've gone through confirmation and baptism and i go to church and pray. a few years ago i was exposed to witchcraft during covid through tiktok videos and a few of my friends also practice it. I never truly realized how evil it was and how against the bible it was since i was a lukewarm christian up until recently which now i have changed my ways and i feel very close with god and i repent for all of my sins. I did things such as manifestation, spells, cutting chords, tarot readings, having reiki done on me, having my handwriting read as graphology, believed in astrology and having my chart read and analyzed, believing in the power of crystals, doing yoga, meditation, summoning ghosts with my friends and playing those stupid "scary games" basically summoning ghosts and demons such as bloody mary, charlie charlie, and so on. i used many of these practices for selfish reasons and i feel so horrible for being so blinded by my own desires. i take full accountability and i know what i did was so wrong and i know i was so selfish and i strayed so far from the lord. I was also so selfish in the past too not only practicing witchcraft but also praying to god for selfish things such as my atheist ex boyfriend to come back to me since i was so heartbroken. I was praying saying "i will do anything please lord can he come back to me". instead of praying for peace and strength to overcome my sadness i instead prayed for him to come back. in that period of heartbrokeness i also watched many of those tiktok videos that say "if you interact 3 times with this video ___ will happen" or "if you use this sound____ will happen" mostly about my ex coming back or something similar and i prayed they would work. i didn't realized how unbelievably wrong that was to not only believe and pray in other powers other than god when i was practicing witchcraft but also being so so so selfish when i

WAS praying to god. Will God forgive me for these things? i feel like such a failure for being so ignorant and falling into the traps of worldly temptations. please pray for me as i want to strengthen my mind and become free from all of the evil i brought into my life.

As often as we repent, God will forgive us. We must be willing to honestly strive not to do those things again, and pray to God for the essential help of Jesus Christ’s Atonement in our live.

Funnily enough Bloody Mary has a completely Christian origin. Bloody Mary references Mary Tudor who famously burned Protestants when she was Queen of England. So if you're Catholic then you were immune to the wrath of Bloody Mary. However if you're anything other than Catholic then watch out. A ghost story to be sure but one inspired by Christian conflict which created a Christian boogeyman.

No. We need to repent or stop sinning by accepting and practicing the Christ's spoken words. Otherwise a person is condemned if they reject the Christ's word and not practice his words:

Luke 6:46-49 ‘Why do you call me, “Lord, Lord,” and do not do what I say? 47 As for everyone who comes to me and hears my words and puts them into practice, I will show you what they are like. 48 They are like a man building a house, who dug down deep and laid the foundation on rock. When the flood came, the torrent struck that house but could not shake it, because it was well built. 49 But the one who hears my words and does not put them into practice is like a man who built a house on the ground without a foundation. The moment the torrent struck that house, it collapsed and its destruction was complete.’

John 12:48 'There is a judge for the one who rejects me and does not accept my words;

the very words I have spoken will condemn them at the last day.'

John 5:14 ‘See, you are well again. Stop sinning or something worse may happen to you.’

Luke 5:32 'I have not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.’

This nonsense and lies of confessing sins and acceptance of the sacrifice or the death of the Son of Man on the cross is a perfect religion for those who want to honor the Christ with their lips but their hearts are far from him and to worship him in vain, i.e. to keep sinning and being wicked:

Mark 7:6-7 'These people honour me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me.
7 They worship me in vain; their teachings are merely human rules.”

Christianity obviously hasn't learned why God desires mercy not sacrifice:
Matthew 9:13 'But go and learn what this means: “I desire mercy, not sacrifice.” For I have not come to call the righteous, but sinners.’

Sacrifice does not require repentance or to stop sinning. Meaning a person is still a sinner and evil as they are not accepting and practicing the Christ's teaching. Therefore they will be condemned at the last day:

John 12:47-49 ‘If anyone hears my words but does not keep them, I do not judge that person. For I did not come to judge the world, but to save the world. 48 There is a judge for the one who rejects me and does not accept my words; the very words I have spoken will condemn them at the last day. 49 For I did not speak on my own, but the Father who sent me commanded me to say all that I have spoken.'

Anyone here who wants me to elaborate or interested in learning more, just start a chat with me.

I do take the narrow path that only a few people find that leads to life. I don't belong to the world nor have a place to lay my head but what good is it for someone to gain the whole world, yet forfeit their soul?

Do you actually believe in the paranormal?
So I've been practicing ceremonial magick for 6 years already, but with an increasing curve in discipline at first and almost reducing my practice to turn into christian mysticism last year, because I thought it would give me what I've been wanting.

So I felt some strong effects and had a dozen or so deep experiences, specially those times I meditated twice daily...but been reading my first magick journal and what my goals were in 2019 turned completely upside down in the end...I mean everyone I've known enter into this to have an "easier" life...then one more experienced guy comes and tell you that was not the point for starters, and my life has become hellish, anxiety increased exponentially over those years.

So I mean even the LBRP is polarizing...it's a banish ritual that doesn't actually banish "entities" neither does protect you...even Lyam Christopher says it's a very misunderstood ritual that actually makes your life harder, so I ask myself what's the point?

I don't know if there's something out there, but I think we are too far from being able to pull the right strings...in the other hand most of the stuff has great coincidences with some advanced psychology techniques so wanted to know from practicing people if you still believe in the “paranormal”, if you see this as coping, or you are so used to this that stop doing them would feel weird?

Please my interest in knowing and learning from your experiences is honest.

Edit: fixed a typo

I think a lot of the "modern magick" stuff circulating these days has lost any connection with praxis that goes beyond "advanced psychological techniques," and a lot of what we've been conditioned to expect as "paranormal experiences" are just Hollywood elaborations of superstition and folklore, so it can be quite a process to unlearn all the bullshit and get on a path that leads to good results.

Sometimes, finding that the pursuit of magic has led us into a more hellish material life means it's time for a reset and a reappraisal of the principles that ground us.

As a chaote, yes and no.
The supernatural is often misunderstood. Most people’s idea of it is this vague, fantasy-like thing straight out of fiction. It’s not that. I usually urge new practitioners to understand what the supernatural actually is before diving deeper, because it can get very confusing otherwise.

You mention psychology, I actually study psychology, and I think it goes hand in hand with magick. My belief is that everything lies within consciousness. Call it God, the Universe, or whatever you like reality is ultimately an extension of our consciousness. Psychology supports this in a way: everyone lives in their own version of reality.

Magick, then, is the art of manipulating consciousness. Notice how much of it engages the mind. Whether you’re working with the unconscious, subconscious, superconscious, gnosis, thoughtforms, or servitors it’s all consciousness work at the core.

TL;DR: There isn’t some external “thing” out there doing the magick. You are doing it by shifting and shaping your own consciousness, which in turn shapes reality.

Esoterically speaking, this is the same as bending reality, interacting with the fabrics of reality or whatever.

A bit vague for me. Are you implying 'bending reality' involves affecting your experience of qualia as a person, or actually effectuating change beyond the particles you're inhabiting as a consciousness, independent of speech or action?

If we had a window into a higher dimension where our consciousness appeared to us much like any object does to us in our current dimension, we would see consciousness impacting physical reality in our dimension more clearly.

But from our current dimension, we can’t “see” consciousness in its totality as an object. We know it exists bc it’s how we experience anything. But from our perspective it has these mysterious properties where it’s sort of everywhere and nowhere, popping in and out of reality at odd times, and its intensity waxes and wanes so we don’t have a linear relationship ship with it. A black box looks very different when your perspective is inside the box rather than outside of it. Blavatsky believed that the box was YOU and to dissolve that YOU, you dissolve the black box and see everything as it is…and regain the non illusory reality of you.

It’s a puzzle until what’s puzzled goes away…

I would only add that the universe you experience is different for everyone. And you shifting yourself with magick is not doing it for anyone else. that is why you cannot test it by obversiving someone else.

Couple things OP.

Do I 'believe' in the paranormal? No. I KNOW it exists. My experiences, luckily or unluckily, regarding the paranormal is what got me interested in all of this. It's not a question for me.

I would ask you this: what is your goal with working with rituals and the occult?

Are you trying to know if there is an afterlife? Trying to get more powerful? Wondering what the limits of human psi/consciousness is?

I would say this: maybe you would do well switching away from ritual Magick. There are A LOT of different ways to experience psi/consciousness/paranormal.

Try the Gateway Experience tapes. Hop on over to r/remoteviewing and try a remote viewing methodology. I highly recommend learning how to Lucid Dream. And after that, experiment with astral projection.

These are great, and safe (except in the rarest of occasions) ways to explore reality that do not involve working with entities or doing rituals. Everything you need in life/existence is already inside of you. You don't need to follow some Grimoire, or even need to believe in any one thing. Learn how to use your own mind to explore the universe and figure it out for yourself, experientially.

The Gateway tapes are excellent, and essentially standardize trance states.

You can tell a GWE graduate to go to focus 15, and everyone knows the specific brainwave state to enter.

Hope more people find them 🥰

Hi there, well I had my share of very deep experiences as I've said and those moments I knew it for sure there was something, but life goes on and what is left is information…I know I can get into a trance with some days of focused practice and then experience very blissful states of conscience. But it can be a trick of the mind too…even though a very cool and desirable one.

As I've stated wanted to make my life easier, that was my reason to dive into this. It was not that occurred it to me, it was basically the premise behind the material I've studied. Then got in Golden Dawn and it was also the premise.

I will give a look to your suggestions.

Thank you for answering.

If an easier life is what you desire, maybe your best path is to reframe how you perceive the world. I recommend this video and channel. He goes in depth into human psychology using elements of Jungian ideas, Buddhism, etc. Click baity title but excellent stuff.

https://youtu.be/Imaf9AmCbzs?si=dhZb1a6cxihVWExS

Working on the self, the internal, will only make you a better magical practitioner if and when you're ready to move along the path.

In my experience, magic/energies/entities exist both within our psyche and outside of it. It's both an external element and purely psychological. Rituals/psychodrama exist to 'tune' our metaphysical mind to our goal/will and awaken our unconscious mind/spirit, at the same time the various paraphernalia used have their own natural vibrations/energies that help to further said goals. The entities (deities, spirits, kakodemons, agathodemons) are aspects of our internal deity/true Self, that are externalised in order for our limited minds/consciousness to commune with them and transmute aspects of our psychosybthesis. It goes way further that just 'changing habits', it can transmute our soul on an quintenssential level and thus attune it energetically with various aspects of the internal and external universe.

The fact that occult practices may lead some people to hellish existence comes from their own internal conflicts, fears, doubts, immaturity, weakness of personality/philosophy, mental issues and false dogmatism.

Lastly, there is no sich thing as 'paranormal'; everything is according to universal laws and mechanisms. It is because we cannot or do not perceive or understand said mechanisms and laws that we brand certain phenomema as 'paranormal'.

It would be foolish of me, due to the experiences that made me, to say something different than: I don't merely believe in the paranormal; this energy is completely mixed within me; my existence is paranormal -- and I am just using this term because that's how you initiated this discussion -- not simply because the chances are odd, but the final production, which is my body, in each second, is powerful.

Be caring with yourself. There is a gigantic difference between understanding something and truly assimilating it; to understand the many concepts discussed in this sub is like explaining the horizon to a person that never left it's prison, and therefore don't know about the outside world; assimilating those same concepts is finally leaving the prison, going out there to the highest mountain and seeing what the horizon actually is.

It takes more than understanding to actually connect with magick. One must feel it, otherwise it's just pretending and the universe knows the difference between "faking it until you make it" and being awakened.

True inner power, at least from my small experience, comes from intuition, not books. It means that performing theatrical rituals just because it was written in an old book, might not be the best use of your power. On the other hand, performing random acts that popped from within while doing your own ritual, might unlock an immense amount of power without you even realizing -- and oftentimes not even being able to connect cause and consequence, so it just feels random.

Let's keep in mind that we are all different, so not everyone will connect with magick the same way. Some are indeed going to benefit a lot from ancient wisdom on books; others are meant to just keep perpetuating information and keeping it alive; and there are a few that are meant to build, unlock or remember new systems. Perhaps your current path is simply made for someone else and that's causing doubt. Try different approaches.

I wish you the best ❤️ 🧜‍♀️

I've experienced the paranormal. I've had Magical experiences that were definitely paranormal and I've seen ghostly activity. So yes, I believe in the paranormal.

It's complicated for me. I believe some stuff, but not all. In order to conduct some types of ritual, I often find myself having to "suspend disbelief" for it to work.

Belief implies that there's still an element of faith involved, meaning you haven't experienced the thing for yourself in such a way that you know it to be true. Some people believe in something higher because they were told by somebody they trusted. Others know that there is something higher because they have had direct experience of it.

I dont believe in the paranormal, I know the paranormal exists.

This is a great post. It really illustrates how post-magical revival ceremonial magic is on a spectrum between something-akin-to-psychology and mysticism. I'm glad you found mysticism and feel that will give you what you want.

It also illustrates how people come in wanting magic and get derailed by people telling them that all this is the real point of magic. It isn't. Those people are wrong. But they have been super prevalent for decades. I don't know why the late 19th and early 20th century had so many people trying to reframe magic as mysticism and psychology aside from a desire to be respectable and scientific. There were people engaged in more conventional magic at the time so the development of a "revival" that ultimately disconnected from traditional magic is a bit strange.

In any case, if you like mysticism, great. Pursue that. If you want actual magic, look at the grimoires/cunningfolk, some of the living spirit traditions, folk magic practices or pre-20th century witchcraft. You can do that and do mysticism and both will probably more directly get you to each of their goals than a hybrid glued together with various theosophies.

The post-GD approach is good as a training system. That's what it was intended to be. But as the tradition broke folks carried it forward as if it was the thing itself because what comes after the training system part wasn't as fully systematized.

If someone's life gets crappy while doing the LBRP, some of that is the general alchemical process that the Order of the Golden Dawn grades work through (successfully completing that work requires that you un-crappy your life) and some of it is probably a lack of real guidance and structure within the system which should help provide supports for dealing with that.

I guess I forgot to say I was a Golden Dawn member. Yet I don’t blame LBRP just it surprises me the lack of consensus about the simplest ritual.

It depends on your definition of "paranormal", I suppose. Angels, spirits, deities, forces outside our comprehension? Certainly. I don't particularly believe in possession or ghosts or anything like that (though my mind is always open to change).

When I began ceremonial magick, I came from the POV of "it's all psychological", you change your habits, you change how you are. Psychological alchemy, in a sense. In more recent years, I've become increasingly more spiritual (also a Christian Mystic) and have worked on evocations which have made me not believe, but know, that there is something greater than us out there.

I go through ebbs and flows. What I usually see as paranormal at first usually just ends up being some kind of lesson I'm trying to instill in myself or the mindset I'm trying to achieve, but feel like I need "outside" help.

For example, I really wanted to apologize to a friend I wronged 10 years ago. It ate at me constantly, and I tried everything I could spiritually and mentally to push past it because I didn't want to enter this person's life to selfishly try and soothe my guilt.

One night I'm struggling really hard with the guilt, so I say out loud to "God", "Look I need some concrete proof here that all this work was worth it and this is the right path, or I'm gonna go off the deep end."

I'm usually not one to pick bargains with God and shit but I was at my limit. Long story short, I received a friend request from Instagram from that exact girl out of the blue, and when I apologized to her it turns out she didn't really care. Many, many worse things had happened to her since and she just missed having me around. She was more upset that I disappeared than the fact I was shitty when we were young.

Basically, I was tormenting my own soul for years trying to achieve a spiritual penance I didn't even really need. I was an axe who remembered the tree that forgot. That in itself was a gigantic revelation though, and ever since I take any signs I get as guidance. I do have an OCD diagnosis mind you, so take all of this with that in mind.

Is it silly sometimes? Yes. Does my belief lead to positive changes in my life, mental health and spirit sometime? Yes, even if it goes the long way sometimes. It might be cope, it might be flat out fake, but I always find my way back around.

Do I believe in the paranormal? Yes and No.
Paranomal just means unexplained by empirical materialism aka "Science". It is a synonym of Supernatural.
So sure, I believe in the supernatural.

But the way a lot of people use the word "paranormal" in my experience is "ALIENS!" and conspiracy theories, and absolutely unhinged self invented maps with "Illuminati" symbols all over it, and rants about the black cube and how we are all in the matrix and NO, I don't believe in that.

I was raised in the occult fringe. My parents engaged with it, and their parents did too. My parents were pretty level headed about it. They didn't embrace weird diets, or drinking urine, and they also recognized that somethings were best dealt with very accessible and successful things like vaccines, and allopathic medicine. As an adult I learned that my parents were often quite sensible about when it came to the care of their children, and also just following the law, whereas other parents in the same group were not that way.

I have had many experiences that cannot be explained by science. But I also know that magic and the occult doesn't magically create an easy life. Nothing does. It can help you move towards your goals, but wealth, lovers, and every fantasy you have ever mentally gooned to doesn't just fall in place from a single spell. That is what most people want coming to this, and when they finally figure out that is not how it works, they get disenchanted because it's not the shortcut they had hoped for. Because that is what they are looking for, a short cut.

I think most talk about the LBRP is useless. I think people actually miss the point that the LBRP is just that, lesser. There is a Greater and an Ultimate, and then those actually instruct you in Calling the Watchtowers, which is where magic that is goal driven is done. The rituals of the pentagram are just mnemonic devices so that by the time you start calling the watchtowers, you have the whole process memorized and you don't have to stop and start while peering at the pages of a book in candle light.

But that is just the golden dawn. There is much more. As you mentioned Christian Mysticism, which has plenty. But mysticism is for contemplation and people whose physical well being is already taken care of. They are either monks, nuns, or priests living in monasteries or rectories, or heirs of a fortune, or they intentionally choose to live in poverty or a very simple life, without most modern conveniences.

Whereas folk magic practitioners were all about getting money, solving love and marriage problems, driving away enemies, etc... Some of these people might even be monks or priests in some cultures, because their religion recognizes that the laity can't pursue enlightenment on an empty stomach, or while pining away for love. Usually in Western Culture, these things were separate. The local warlock or witch might really be a housewife or farmer, who while taking care of the house, and managing the agricultural business, the neighbors come visit because they have a reputation for being "cunning" wink wink nudge nudge and being capable of dealing with illnesses, or the lovelorn, or their cow suddenly not producing milk even though she just had a calf. But even these people knew better than to expect fireballs and lightning bolts and exploding heads.

The LBRP is absolutely used for banishing, and is useful for most low level astral critters.

The LBRP cleans the space The LIRP makes it holy

But also, the whole world has been turned upside down since 2019, everyone is going thru this right now.

Did you go thru a curriculum?

Modern Magic, by Don Michael Craig, is a very good primer.

Damien Echols's youtube and patreon are excellent as well.

Where you really see spooky action close up is in the evocation of spirits. (Which Craig covers)

He includes all you need to summon Lord YHVH, which you may know better as the god of abraham.

You're on the right track, these skills have excruciating plateaus tho.

I’m another one who doesn’t “believe” in the paranormal; I KNOW it exists - a la Hamlet’s line “there are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy.”

But at the same time, I don’t do magic to make life easier. Or at least, not for the most part, beyond a few minor cantrips and spells that don’t overset balance, or that seek to correct what others tore asunder. I do magic to bring me closer to unity with ultimate godhead - whatever you choose to call the Divine. I have deities and powers I work with, but I know they are emanations of an ultimate, unknowable force. That is my goal; to eventually unite with that source of all.

If you’re just trying to make your life on earth easier, you’re thinking mighty small. But you do you.

Experiences/Reviews of Black Rose Witchcraft?
I'm considering this introductory course (https://www.modernwitchuniversity.com/black-rose-witchcraft/) which seems a blend of Feri, Conjure and Traditional Witchcraft. I like the look of it but before dropping about $400 I wanted to ask if people had honest feedback about the course. It seems that reviews of Black Rose Witchcraft are scarce compared to more popular occult courses - curious to hear people's experiences!

And if you took Black Rose Witchcraft, did you feel you needed to continue on to their next level Feri program or did you take the teachings of Black Rose Witchcraft and merge it with something else? How does it compare to other popular occult courses? Thanks!

Pay $400 on a course if you really like the teacher and want to support what they're doing. Do not expect to get $400 worth of magical education. If your expectations are exceeded, awesome.

the best teacher is experience. for $400 you could buy a plethora of books (or a shit load of rum while you torrent pdfs) and learn/practice what you want. everyone has a different value of things but someone charging 400bucks for a course in anything sounds like a scam. "for only $400, i can teach you how to make money off your friends"

Manicwoodchipper

99.9% of people charging to teach you like that are either scam artists or they’re giving you information you could get from a $30 book or for free online for hundreds of dollars. If you want to learn from people, try to connect with people in your area or online. There are plenty of people who will help just to help. Otherwise spend the money on books and explore things on your own.

If you want a structured introduction to a magical tradition so you can develop basic skills in a guided manner, then Thelemic Union has an introductory course to Aleister Crowley's theory of magic(k) for $93. (Inb4 Crowley was xyz, everyone knows he was a dirty bastard but that doesn't change the fact practically all modern occultism is downstream of him, even if people want to ignore that fact.) You can adapt the actual readings to whatever you'd like.

Otherwise, LibGen and Anna's Archive give you access to practically all books ever published. Start there and keep your money.

I'm not in it so I can't give reviews of the course material, but I can dispute the claims it's a scam.

Some of the teachers are well known authors. Devin Hunter, Storm Faerywolf, and Chas Bogan. I believe Mat Auryn is also a member, though I'm unsure if he teaches there or what his "rank" is.

Whether you're getting $400 worth of value is up to personal opinion, but it's a pretty average price to train under at least three well known occult authors. The Temple of Witchcraft (with Christopher Penzak) and Jason Miller's Strategic Sorcery classes can also be a tad up there in cost.

I can say that the teachers named on the website are active, dedicated, accomplished practitioners with years of involvement in Craft and magic. They have useful practices and understandings to teach.

If the tuition is within somebody's budget, then I think that it is worthwhile spending on magical skill building and Craft practice.

As someone who has read the teachers books, i think it’s actually a good deal. If you pay in advance its 26 per month for 13 months. 4 lessons oer month at $6.50 per lesson. These people record videos and send lessons. Their time is worth that amount of money. Im currently taking a $100 per month course by jason miller and im learning more than i ever learned in his books. Invest in yourself

r/occult - Seen in a dream
I've been having a lot of dreams lately about a woman who either shows me sigils, leaves them written on things or puts them permanently on my body. Last night I dreamt that I was in a water rapid heading towards a water fall and she said she'd pull me out if I agreed to be hers. I agreed and this was permanently on my chest. Any ideas?

Were you in a cave-like setting, or were the rapids open air? Any additional, relevant details to this or other dreams?

If you use divination or practice visionary magic as part of your practice, I'd try either one of those methods to decipher who or what you got in contact with, and why. The sigils may be keys you can use in magical workings (provided you do any such workings) but you'd need to figure out on your own how and for what purpose.

Not in a cave just open air and woods all around me. I posted the other two dreams I've had of her in a comment below. I don't use divination yet. As far as visionary magic I do shadow work from time to time and I usually go into a trance and have visions in not sure if that counts. I don't do magical workings yet such as rituals or spells etc but I'm working towards it slowly

I just read the two other dreams. I think there's a lot to unpack, actually. So here's a couple questions, you don't have to answer to me necessarily, they're more things to think about:

What's going on in your life at this time? Is it a time of drastic change (changing jobs, moving to another place, changes in your relationships, a loss of someone dear to you...), in which case these dreams may be psychological, and a bit of shadow work or psychological pathwork could help. You might be going through a lot and the lady might be this destructive wave, or a part of you that you're trying to come to terms with. If on the other hand nothing big is going on, you might be picking up on some energy current outside of yourself, or some sort of being might be trying to come in contact with you.

How do these dreams (or the lady specifically) make you feel? I've noticed that despite her explicit power over you/the situation, she sort of shifts from curser to savior, and all throughout she seems like someone who can oversee and decide your fate. Either way, I'd suggest you don't let this situation overwhelm you, as strong emotions can quickly do more damage than the dreams themselves, be they psychological or magical. Even if it is some kind of being that's trying to scare you, the best thing you could do is simply not let it scare you.

Something I would do if I were you, is record the dreams and the symbols in a notebook, and maybe meditate on the symbols to see what comes out, if anything does. If this turns out to have magical relevance, once you'll get to work in a ritual setting you might be able to use them, but there's no rush in that: if that door has opened for you, it'll still be open when you come to work magically in accordance to your natural development, and you'll be stronger and more knowledgeable by then.

Good luck on your path

Just from a visual interpretation, that looks like a mountain with a pool leading to a waterfall on it. Though it could also be an up-arrow or even alchemical fire symbol with a shepherd's crook.

I'm not as knowledgeable as most here about the various forms of sigils, but from a personal experience of trying to make sense of sigils that pop up to me from time to time

This feels like something to bind, as you said it was realted to her The point reminds me of the fire alchemical symbol but incomplete, like, something is hooking onto you, to your core, lets say to the fire of the soul, in an attempt get power but also help Somewhat of a trade off

I've had something similar happen to me except, it claimed me when I was like 7-8. Just a brand on my wrist glowing golden yellow. I didn't consent 😂

The entity who gave me that brand had a voice of man and woman, but it didn't reveal its identity to me though. My first encounter in a long time took place 1 month ago.

Apparently you're being tested. Keep in mind that whatever you agreed on isn't bonding, so keep an open mind in this regard. If this woman keeps appearing in your dreams, you might be dealing with a mentor who's willing to follow your evolution, but if you realize that such presence is meant to damage you, get rid of it any way you know how without feeling compelled to stick to any previous agreement. There is no bonding contract in the spiritual world. It's all based on will.

This particular sigil makes me think of the Temple's door. It appears to describe a "descending" path toward the depths of Earth. It could be either "Infernal" (if you depict it as Inferus - underground) or Elemental/Alchemic (where depth means initiation through the knowledge of matter)

I would say it was a very very good dream. From it I can see that you were being dragged by circunstances of life or egoic mindset to an empty and boring life. The woman in your dream represents your soul rescuing you from your terrible destiny. She will guide you to a beatiful and adventurous life if allow to. You two are more close now but still apart. I would say that you should listen to her more when awaken, she's defenitly speaking to you but you are not paying attention

I wish the best luck in your new life ahead!

Downloaded 900GB .rar archive, stuck at 99.9%
A few months ago on r/DHExchange, a user posted a 900GB torrent that was his giant collection of esoteric and occult themed content.

I've was in contact with him months ago, but long story short that user is now MIA, and myself and multiple bittorrent peers are stuck at 99.9%, only a couple hundred MB left needed.

I can open it with 7-zip (there's some pretty interesting stuff in there), but I'm concerned some of the files are going to be corrupted so I don't want to officially put it on my NAS and forget about it.

My question is- is there any way to recover this file without having that last <.01% of data? Or what exactly could missing <.01% do to the contents of an open-able .rar file?

Not sure where else to turn, any help would be appreciated.

I ran right click > 7-zip > test archive, and it ran a test. The only errors it found were a header error, and a single .mp3 file.

results

That file is only 73MB. Does that mean everything else downloaded in the archive is healthy, but the remaining ~400MB of stuff is simply missing?

Hey, it's esoteric occult material. Maybe it's meant to be corrupted, and there's a dark ritual necessary to decompress it.

If you unzip it with 7zip, it will tell you what's broken / not complete. Any part that unzips successfully without errors relayed from 7zip has passed the checks and should be fine.

Unless it has a par file (unlikely) or something similar, no way I know of to fix the file as a whole.

Hey OP, I think you should be good. Check where in the file you have missing pieces (beginning, middle of file) your best bet would be to have to verify which files aren't corrupt. Seeing you're missing .01% of your torrent most of your archive should be good

Aquifel
8y ago
Hmm, it looks like there was a part likely missing from the middle, and it didn't know how to continue past that. Usually in my experience, it can figure it out and work past it, but I guess we didn't get completely lucky in this case. Anything in the resulting directory besides that mp3 file mentioned should be fine though.

There are programs out there that can repair rar files which probably wouldn't be able to restore that above mentioned mp3 (since really, part of it is just missing), but may be able to get you access to some of the files that came afterwards. May have to download rar proper and bust out the terminal, but you might try the suggestion here:

RAR (and indeed most archive formats) store CRCs for every file within. During unpacking (or test) these are verified. It will tell you if anything is corrupt.

The recovery system is built in - if they used it. From the help screens on winrar...but works the same on the Linux version. A 10% recovery record can repair about 10% of damage.

Command R - repair a damaged archive

Archive repairing consists of two stages. First, the damaged archive is scanned for recovery record (see the rr command). If archive contains the previously added recovery record and if damaged data area is continuous and smaller than error correction code size in recovery record, chance of successful archive reconstruction is high. When this stage has been completed, a new archive is created, named as fixed.arcname.rar, where 'arcname' is the original (damaged) archive name.

If damaged archive does not contain the recovery record or if archive cannot be completely recovered due to severe damage, second stage is performed. During this stage only the archive structure is reconstructed and it is impossible to recover files which fail checksum validation, but it is still possible to recover undamaged files which were inaccessible due to a corrupt archive structure. Generally this is useful for non-solid archives. In a damaged solid archive, often, only the first file may be recovered during the second stage. This stage is not performed for archives with encrypted file names, which can be repaired only if recovery record is present.

When this stage has been completed, a new archive will be created, named as rebuilt.arcname.rar, where 'arcname' is the original archive name.

By default, repaired archives are created in the current folder, but you can append an optional destpath\ parameter to specify another destination folder.

This command is the command line equivalent of the file management command Repair archive.

Example repair buggy.rar and place the result to 'c:\fixed' folder

WinRAR r buggy.rar c:\fixed\

I just got around to seeing your response but yours was definitely the most thorough one here, thanks!

Sadly, I don't believe that this uploader added any sort of recovery record. I downloaded winrar (apparently 7zip doesn't have this feature), ran the 'repair' command, and it's given me this response thus far:

Esoteric Library.rar
Detecting archive type...
---> RAR

Build G:\repair jobby\fixed.Esoteric Library.rar Searching for recovery record
---> recovery record not found
Build G:\repair jobby\rebuilt.Esoteric Library.rar I'm assuming it's building the second 'rebuild the archive with only undamaged files' step you referenced in your explanation- luckily this archive is built largely of thousands of PDFs rather than anything larger, so it has a good chance of recovering the vast majority of it.

My only problem now is that I have no idea how long this is going to take- winrar doesn't give any sort of status bar or MBps, and the HDD it's on has been at 100% usage for the past two hours. Even if it takes a few days that's okay, but with a file this large I wouldn't be surprised if it ran continuously for much longer than that.

Thanks again for your response.

Sorry then...your winrar efforts are probably useless. Rar isn't magic. That recovery record must be included. It is a mystery why this torrent publisher left it out. Indicates a serious lack of self doubt that he failed to include something which might have provided an "over"? Hubris.

Perhaps it's time to return to your torrent software to see if it can fix the file. Most of those products have a "verify" function. That's your last hope.

If he included a recovery record, the file will fix itself if you initiate the recovery procedure.

If he didn't, some of your files are toast.

There's unlikely to be PAR files for a torrent. It would just be a waste of bandwidth since torrents have checksums built in.

Where would the .par be? Just in the same directory as the .rar itself?

Par files are more common with things downloaded from Usenet, would be rare and kind of odd to see one for a torrent. It would be a separate file likely in the same directory if so.

Ancient Magic Books That Still Exist
Real or not, this subject has always interested me. I am talking about ancient books, occult books, spells, demonology and all this sort of knowledge and the book on the subject.

So, I want to share with you this interesting YouTube video that features 4 ancient magic books that still exist, a few copies left and are stored in preserved places.

Some say they are a hoax, others are written in an unknown language and there's even a debate in which order one book in this video should be read.

Just for fun, how do you think about this subject? Do some of these books interest you?

I know I always wished I could be like Johnny Depp in "The Ninth Gate", searching for ancient, mysterious and rare books.

Here's the link to the video.

Have a great day!

You might enjoy the Hermetica. Actually, for mention of a great number of texts, and a bloody good story, you should try Umberto Eco's Foucault's Pendulum.

I describe it as a thinking man's Dan Brown.

Gager Curse Tablets and Binding Spells from the Ancient World

Kotansky Greek Magical Amulets

Meyere and Smith Ancient Christian Magic

Betz The Greek Magical Papyri

Daniel and Maltomini Supplementum Magicum

Borghouts Ancient Egyptian Magical Texts

Brashear "The Greek Magical Papyri" ANRW

and that's just some of the scholarly works that are in English and are book length...

Then there are the entire databases dedicated to this like the PGM and PDM, papyrologica gracae and demotica (respectively) magicorum

What was magic like in ancient cultures? Today, when we think of fantasy shows with magic, we think of fireballs and lightning bolts, perhaps making people levitate, etc.. But what did people used to think magic was? This is a broad question of course, I'm interested in all cultures!

Looking to build up a library of occult books out of curiosity, any suggestions?
If there's anything I love it's books and the weird things. And so I would like to start collecting books on the subject of the occult to add to my growing personal library. Anything from publications of ancient religious texts, grimoires, histories/biographies of occult orders/practitioners etc, you get the picture. All suggestions are welcome and appreciated, or if there's a link to a thread I missed dealing with this sort of thing that'd be appreciated also, cheers!

Please don't down vote me to hell. I would like to suggest that any open minded, serious student of the occult would do well to begin with the works of skeptics. Rather than dismiss the works of persons skeptical of the occult, at least read them to assist you in being a more discerning pupil of occult tomes. Clearly, not all of books written about occult matters can possibly be true, especially considering that many of them contradict each other to the point of being mutually exclusive. So, how can one avoid reading patently false information as truth? Start by reading some of the book reviews written by skeptics.

I hope im not downvoted for this, but Some unusual recommendations I would suggest are Illuminatus by Robert Anton Wilson, The Invisibles by Grant Morrison, and From Hell by Alan Moore. They're all works of "fiction" but will change your view on some things and get you interested in other forms of the occult.

Nah man you get an upvote for mentioning Illuminatus for sure :)

Sure, it's a work of fiction, but really what does that mean? In the end, isn't it all philosophy, one way or the other?

So, do you want to have a specific aesthetic or a general interest?

If you want an aesthetic, I understand, and western occultism to me looks more aesthetically "magical". Vodun/voodoo particularly New Orleans style comes at a close second.

If you have a general interest, I recommend starting with chaos magic and working backwards. People talk about bullshit like logic and consistency, fuck that, this is magic not science. Science works with logic and is collectivist in that it works for everyone. Magick is illogical and individualistic and works only for those that us it. So, start with chaos magic and then start working on "traditional" magic styles like Thelema, Buddhism, Freemasonry, etc.

I highly recommend starting with any book by Gary Lachman. While he isn't a practicing magician, he is an expert writer/researcher on the occult. His writing style is excellent and makes the esoteric accessible to anyone interested. I think it will get you excited about the ideas, history, and cultural influence behind the practice, where as the more "instructional" books might read like a toaster manual for someone not interested in practice.

The Book of Thoth is the single most useful occult work I've found so far... Not that it's very easy to process... Occultists are notorious for ubfuscating their work.

People also keep telling me to get Bardon's Initiation into Hermetics.

Research Thelema. If you have a hard time finding out where to start, let me know. I am just learning and not a part of O.T.O. or any related orders, but if you want occult illumination, this is it - and there are TONS of related texts, old and new, rare and common. Part of the journey as I understand it is navigating your own way through the texts and getting a good feel for everything as you go.

If you want spooky fiction around, get Lovecraft stuff. You can get some pretty neat collector's versions of his stories with neat bindings just like many other classics that are now in the collective commons.

This blogger just stopped, and I believe is primarily based on Franz Bardon.. so Initiation Into Hermetics. HOWEVER, in this specific last-post he mentions quite a few books.

His second one "New Energy Ways" by Robert Bruce is less Occult in terminology, and like IIH, heavy in practice. I read a part of this "before" discovering IIH and it had for-sure effects, so it's amazing to re-discover it(I forgot and lost it) full-circle, seems Synchronicity-ish to me personally.

http://justinbthemagician.blogspot.nl/2017/06/good-night-and-good-luck.html

I'd also like to recommend Jerry Alan Johnson's Qigong & Taoist Magic books, though I've only really read most of his "Chinese Medical Qigong Therapy" Vol. 1 (2 and 3 sound like where it's at though, 1 is anatomy primarily).

The symbol in the center relates to the desired outcome/the entity being conjured to produce the outcome, the Theban script around it is the name of the servitor being conjured/instructions on how that action is meant to be played out. Its like a script with the lines that are being read by the actor in the middle - a mysterious play, if you will

So it’s basically an explanation of what the sigil is to a being completing the task? So if I made one I could write instructions to the angel I am asking for help? And what does that mean for angelic sigils? What’s the writing for on those?

I think your question is more about sigil design as opposed to knowing exactly what it says.....correct? I use a sigil writer I found years ago and he creates the actual sigil and then fills the empty space with any of the following; words, mini sigils, drawings, images, colors etc. He uses his intuition to add to the sigil itself anything he feels will empower it. That can also be empty space. Once I got one from him that was 3 lines and nothing else. When I asked, he said, 'it's complete just like that. It doesn't want anything more.' You decide what goes where.

I checked out that persons instagram (marsmensch) and they have a phrase for each sigil. they could be using any number of ways to make the main center sigil. "I am strong" was one I saw, so using the duplication/vowel method that leaves "mstrng" then mapped out.

Now as for the symbols around, they seem to normally use an angelic script, but in this case alchemical symbols. I would assume that these encircling symbols relate to the center sigil in a specific purposeful way.
using the above example "I am strong" perhaps you'd want to call upon Mars energy etc and then use the appropriate words. So to find the answer you're looking for, perhaps it lies in the associated sigil sentence

There are plenty of steganography and decryption programs available that can run the cipher through every known encryption package, obviously starting out with zodiacal symbols, Solomons lesser keys, and everything in the occult/ religious ciphers would be a first step. And it will run loads way faster than doing it by hand.

I would suggest hitting up Reddits steganography, cryptography analysis and deciphering boards first. Figure out what you want, learn the names of the programs already available, and download or torrent it.

If you hit a barrier and need help just message me, I'll do my best.

Happy Hunting!

Have you tried transliterating it for a start? Theban to English letters is pretty straightforward. You can find it in Agrippa's 3 books and in the The Sworn Book of Honorius ..and of course on the internet in a google search.

If the sigil is a personal one and not an angel etc, then you will likely only get the jumbled text after the creator reduces the request down.

Yeah I have transliterated it (come to think of it that’s the better word to use) but maybe I should try to translate an Angels circle and see what it says

Yeah I substituted some the letter clockwise starting from the symbol of mercury.

A I (or) j D U (or) V M O D G N.

I do not feel the need to translate the rest of the letters if its gonna look a random like this.

So no I don't know what it means

That’s what I’m saying…could it be a cipher? And we need the correct phrase to change jt

So the issue with these sorts of things is first of all the outer ring might not be words at all. It could have once been words but through a cipher has become obfuscated. The inner part is usually done using magick squares. So without knowing which magick squares were used to generate them it's hard to interpret what they might mean. I can say that it reflects a ceremonial style. Is more than likely a planetary seal drawing inspiration from solomonic magic. generally these are used as amulets to draw certain influences to the wearer. However they are also sometimes used in invocation magick as well.

There's a wikipedia page on it under "theban alphabet" it's a substitution cypher on the Latin alphabet that's been around since the 13th century. A lot is known about it.

Right but what’s the purpose of it around the sigil. When I put it into the Latin alphabet it’s jibberish

It is common to scramble the phrase letters to hide the intention, as a skilled magician can alter its energies. The chaos puts its meaning into question, protecting the sigil from influence. An especially good idea when releasing the sigil to the internet.

It's to empower the sigil further the words stand for it to use and purpose and serve to carry it out more effectively than if the sigil was by itself

A Former Occultist Finds Jesus | My Testimony

This article was posted under r/occult a few seconds ago, so bear in mind the audience of the original post. I wanted to share how exactly Jesus touched my life, and made me clean. I need a few brothers and sisters in Christ to fellowship with for the mutual growth of our faith and a warm friendship indeed. Proverbs 27:17: "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

First and foremost, I am not here to debate with any one of you as I have already branched out of the occult and am aptly satisfied by the nourishment of the vine of Christ. My life has radically transformed in a few short weeks since my redemption -- being washed clean by the baptism of the Holy Ghost -- far from the torment and anguish of the evil spirits who made their abode inside my body. And I admonish those who stand to argue that a sulfur-and-cigarette smelling spirit is simply an "energy" from a better dimension, acting in the behalf of God, when it's glaringly obvious that these demonic beings are straight out of the synagogue of Satan. No, I don't desire to spend my time rehashing something I have already endlessly debated within myself, when I was grasping at straws trying to justify something so evidently evil and wicked. So despite the infinite number of occultism's fronts and the crooked paths it walks, it is rooted in a power source that is diametrically opposed to the LORD God and hostile toward other related faiths. Need I remind all of you of Jesus' multiple post-resurrection appearances to five-hundred "brethren" of Paul the Apostle (1 Cor. 15:7) and Paul himself on the road to Damascus (Acts 9)? Christ himself, in a rather noble, sensible, and uplifting act gave up the most important thing he had to bridge the gap between mankind's imperfections with the holiness and love of the Father. And that sacrificial act is a constant reminder that good and evil are not one and the same.

I cannot express how truly dangerous the occult is, and I am reaching out to those of you with a vestige of conscience buried under the rubble, and to the courageous seekers who want something deeper and more fulfilling from a cherishing, Creator God who loves you in spite of the inevitable shortcomings we face. Nesting a few small seeds of faith under good soil in anticipation of the Lord is as simple as grabbing a copy of the "Good Book" and learning from an immutable God who seeks to share a unique bond with human beings while protecting them from the cosmic forces of darkness. And that book is described fully in John's gospel: "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. It serves no purpose to have dealings with deceptive and demonic forces that string you along like a puppet in the name of having power over other people tied to the pursuits of this world. You are not God, and all branches of occultism are successful in fueling your ego into believing that you are and should be feared. But it's not the case: and those who defile their spirit with abominable, devilish spirits are those that face a torrent of fear and restlessness daily (Isaiah 48:22 writes: There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked.)

Drawing up pathetic sigils and flipping through the pages of a grimoire brings you no closer to filling that vacuum-sized hole in your heart that cleaves for the LORD God. For it is written in the fifth chapter of Mark's gospel, "And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm." Isn't that the most ardent desire of the beating heart inside all of us -- a gap that can only be filled by the Holy Spirit of God, who proclaims His presence, "Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid"? My friends, there is no measurable incentive for me to write this letter unto you: but I am doing so because I know all about those spell books, and the power supplied by unclean spirits who talk out of the dust (Is. 29:4); I had everything I could ever dream of and more, but my personality was subsumed by the darkness I had allowed into my life. It wasn't long before I morphed into this foul spirit (a problem remedied by Jesus Christ). I also knew intimate details about people's thought patterns and sin, made a mockery of God (and hated what He stood for), and became an empty vessel where the man in the captain's cabin was unrecognizable. And the spirit of suicide attempted to take my life several times: Precisely, why would the Holy Spirit of God -- or another "benevolent" spirit -- foment the thought to bring harm upon yourself? The simple answer to the question it was an evil spirit spawned from the devil himself; scoffing, huffing-and-puffing makes it no less truthful.

And finally, lending an ear to the prophets of evil who exist now and those from previous centuries (one such initialed A.C. wrote that he desired to be his "chief of staff") have propagated the lie that there is no personal devil, but merely an impersonal, deistic 'blob' of energy that somehow allots to a few chosen light-bearers who are tasked to raise the consciousness of the whole world. My oh my, how the tables have turned: that sounds awfully similar to a personal deity with ambition and a will (that will assuredly attempt to overthrow the Lamb; "[but] the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.") (Rev. 17:14) But there is hope to be had beyond the dead-end street of occult insanity and darkness; there is a light at the end of the miles-long tunnel (John 1:29). Christ is the gauze inside of your first-aid kit; the loving good shepherd who will comfort and heal you, as John writes in his gospel: "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. [...] And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." You see, I thought there was no hope for me before I was saved -- and I was convinced the night before it happened that, as my mind and soul were plagued by demonic manifestations and voices, my condition couldn't improve and I would subsequently lose my mind. The LORD tossed me a lifejacket in spite of my innumerable sin and blasphemies that sunk me further and further into the mire. My enemies in spirit were great in number, and I parallel these experiences with the writings of King David in Psalm 69:4;21: "They that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away. [...] They gave me also gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink."

But remember, greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world. And for this cause your heart will live that seek God. The LORD will search you, and replace your heart of stone with a heart of flesh; and supply that water unto everlasting life, instead of the false fountain that yields salt and freshwater. It is pure -- straight from the rock of God. Take it from me, a former occultist: He will never let you down. Let the wisdom of the God rule within the walls of your heart, as penned in Proverbs 3:19-22: "The LORD by wisdom hath founded the earth: by understanding hath he established the heavens. By his knowledge the depths are broken up, and the clouds drop down the dew. My son, let them not depart from thine eyes: keep sound wisdom and discretion: So shall they be life unto thy soul, and grace to thy neck." Wisdom from God is more valuable than rubies, and is weaved throughout the Bible in formats that can be applied to different areas of our life. Such is of critical importance as pertains to James 4:7-8: "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded." There's no need in mending the Bible's wisdom with the wisdom of a corrupt world.

These are the kind of Christians that make people turn away from religion. They never practice what they preach, their policies and beliefs contradict each other, they think this world is so black and white, lack empathy, and yet they still want the line between separation of church and state

I think one of the most important things any practicing or aspiring occultist should know, if not THE most important, is this:

Rending the veil and having a visionary/transcendent experience is the easy part, it's coming back down to earth and integrating it in a healthy manner thats the hard part.

Cracking open your third eye, awakening your Kundalini, stepping into the abyss, etc. etc. etc. that's all the easy part. Anyone, and I mean anyone who wants a shortcut could rock up to their local Greatful Dead cover band and score a heroic dose of DMT (or some similar drug) and then blast themselves up into supernal transcendence. The truly difficult part is the required physical/mental health and groundedness needed so that you can come back down to earth safely and apply what you learned to useful ends. Otherwise, best case scenario is that these experiences just inflate your ego and end up being self-defeating to your goals, and these holy visionary moments become their own addictive escapism. Worst case scenario is, well, gaining a very intimate understanding of the failings of your local mental health medical care system.

I dont say any of this to frighten or to villify drug use or shortcuts themselves. Rather I just want to impress on others the sheer necessity of having a strong foundation, and the only way to gain that is through regular and consistent practice. Chop wood and carry water.

Occultism doesn't pay the bills ... unless you're one of those few individuals who makes a living writing books on it, or selling bling and supplies. Or I suppose if you are very successful at wealth magic. But otherwise there is no money in it.

There are so many occultists I know who seem chronically underemployed or unemployed and have problem making ends meet. Don't lose your life in this stuff.

Thank you. My friends that practice wealth magick are two of the most broke friends I have. I'm not going to say it doesn't work, because the amount of coincidence and opportunity that comes into their lives strikes awe in me. The thing is, in order to make money, you have to spend a lot of time working on actually making money. The material world has rules that need to be respected if you want material results

4y ago
I'm always telling folks that if you don't follow up a magickal working with mundane actions (or worse, your mundane actions counteract the magickal working), then you are wasting your time. Don't do a love spell and then never try to meet people. Don't do a job spell and never put out a job application. Don't do a cord cutting, but then talk to the person who you are trying to get away from.

Foundational texts. A lot of occultists read obscure titles then foundational texts. e.g. Please read Franz Bardon and not EA Koetting's crew's texts.

Yes. I have mixed feelings about Franz but that EA Koettings how to become a living fraud is 110% bs.

i'm stagnated for years in the first exercise of his first book, although i truly admire and desire the system, i cannot understand it. what he expect with the first steps? achieve dharana or one-pointed concentration, for a beginner? without even mentioned pranayama together? i think that his system can put you back more than help you out sometimes…

If you want to learn how to work with plants, get out to a forest and become one with it. Make friends with the genius loci of the forest, invoke the Green Man who rules all forests, talk to tree nymphs, leave offerings to the plant devas, do your part to pick up trash & refuse, show the Gnomes of the Earth element you desire to learn more about their realm and children and keep at it until you begin to have the dreams where they come to you and start whispering things in your ear or they start talking to you while meditating under a big old tree. Write your info in your journal. Ask them to teach you their songs, chants and prayers. You will not need any occult books on herbs because you will soon have all of the plant information needed to heal, succeed or kick some butt.

Non occult general knowledge. Specially "traditional" science (math, physics, history...) and regular philosophy. You can't achieve great results if you don't understand how the world, as a whole, works. Also: the importance of a good physical health, both in magickal life and in non-magickal life

4y ago
Definitely agree with this, although there are a lot of people that learn just enough to fall victim to Dunning-Kruger and never seem to move past the first hill of, "I learned a little about something, so now I'm an expert." The wider vocabulary that you get when you learn about that stuff helps a lot with more abstract concepts though, so I think it's a net positive as long as you don't let ego get in the way.

Armchair magic is bullshit. If you want results go and actually do shit. Sigil, ritual etc. You can read about it all you want, but without actually doing something you won’t get anything.

Physical activity is good. Obviously it’s good for you physical health, but from a magick perspective it’s immensely helpful. Pick up something like Yoga or Tai Chi or jogging.

Back when I was really into sigils, I would lift weights to exhaustion and then look at my sigil to charge it in that state. Results were actually really good!

That magic was invented before they were born, and there are teachings and techniques in languages other than English that English-speaking occultists by and large have never heard of. It's embarrassing how many people seem to think that the very narrow range of magical techniques popular in the present and the very recent past are the be-all and end-all of magic.

I think everyone should be less concerned about rituals and spells and Demons, and start searching for real OCCULT TRUTH, which you cannot notice or find if you aren't both cautious and open minded, nor if your purpose is a selfish one and not sincerely committed in seeking truth.

Pretty much everything from Blavatsky forward is just spicy psychology and not even good psychology at that.

The more vague and grand pronouncements that someone makes, the less likely it is that they have any idea what they are talking about.

Magic is a lot older than Regardie or Crowley. You'll get a lot farther reading Agrippa and the Greek Magical Papyri than you will by reading some Victorian Era take on the tree of life.

I would suggest the internet archive but they've been having some ridiculous legal issues so while I'd still upload to them I'd also archive them in torrent format and post of mega as well. Maybe ask in the datahoarders subreddit for more ideas.

600 GB corpus of all paywalled scholarly sources of Wikipedia
Scholarly publishing is a racket where research entities pay all the costs for the outputs but publishers seize them for free and get the same research entities to pay exorbitant prices to rent them back. In an open publication like Wikipedia, two thirds of the academic sources are paywalled, although many are green open access (archived by open repositories).

A torrent has been compiled from various sources to provide a corpus with nearly all such paywalled papers for Wikipedia in all languages. It contains about 561k PDFs for as many DOIs, divided in 1529 ZIP files for a total of 600 GB. The archives are sorted by publisher (DOI prefix), so you can download just what you can or are most interested in. There's a list of DOIs inside.

The corpus is only for personal and research use, for instance to help text and data mining and any other effort which requires fast or bulk download.

Please preserve a copy and seed! The info_hash and magnet link are:

I'll definitely be downloading this. It's a good start to mirroring the vast library that sci-hub has.

Any downloads for studies not cited by wikipedia? Does sci-hub share their set?

There's a lot of stuff out there, the problem is how to make a mirror usable and sustainable.

LibGen torrents are probably the biggest collection (20+ million?).

Internet Archive's journals collection is the easiest to download individually (almost 2 million, mostly public domain).

CORE datasets have full-text (unformatted?) for almost 10 million articles (mostly with some Creative Commons license?).

As far as I am aware sci-hub doesn't actually have anything saved on their servers. What they do is source login-credentials from people who attend/work for various schools and colleges across the world (because a lot of school pay subscriptions to the various journals so that the students attending can access them as needed) and then use their subscriptions to generate on-demand access keys to the various scientific and medical journals which the person then downloads from.

600 GB corpus of all paywalled scholarly sources of Wikipedia
Scholarly publishing is a racket where research entities pay all the costs for the outputs but publishers seize them for free and get the same research entities to pay exorbitant prices to rent them back. In an open publication like Wikipedia, two thirds of the academic sources are paywalled, although many are green open access (archived by open repositories).

A torrent has been compiled from various sources to provide a corpus with nearly all such paywalled papers for Wikipedia in all languages. It contains about 561k PDFs for as many DOIs, divided in 1529 ZIP files for a total of 600 GB. The archives are sorted by publisher (DOI prefix), so you can download just what you can or are most interested in. There's a list of DOIs inside.

The corpus is only for personal and research use, for instance to help text and data mining and any other effort which requires fast or bulk download.

Please preserve a copy and seed! The info_hash and magnet link are:

Any downloads for studies not cited by wikipedia? Does sci-hub share their set?

There's a lot of stuff out there, the problem is how to make a mirror usable and sustainable.

LibGen torrents are probably the biggest collection (20+ million?).

Internet Archive's journals collection is the easiest to download individually (almost 2 million, mostly public domain).

CORE datasets have full-text (unformatted?) for almost 10 million articles (mostly with some Creative Commons license?).

As far as I am aware sci-hub doesn't actually have anything saved on their servers. What they do is source login-credentials from people who attend/work for various schools and colleges across the world (because a lot of school pay subscriptions to the various journals so that the students attending can access them as needed) and then use their subscriptions to generate on-demand access keys to the various scientific and medical journals which the person then downloads from.

How one young woman broke down the gates of knowledge

By George Monbiot, published in the Guardian 13th September 2018

Never underestimate the power of one determined person. What Carole Cadwalladr has done to Facebook and Big Data and Edward Snowden has done to the state security complex, the young Kazakhstani scientist Alexandra Elbakyan has done to the multi-billion dollar industry that traps knowledge behind paywalls. Her pirate webscraper service, Sci-hub, has done more than any government to tackle one of the biggest rip-offs of the modern era: the capture of research that should belong to us all.

Everyone should be free to learn; knowledge should be disseminated as widely as possible. No one would publicly disagree with these sentiments. Yet governments and universities have allowed the big academic publishers to deny these rights. Academic publishing might sound like an obscure and fusty affair, but it uses one of the most ruthless and profitable business models of any industry.

The model was pioneered by the notorious conman Robert Maxwell. He realised that, because scientists need to be informed about all significant developments in their field, every journal that publishes academic papers can establish a monopoly, and can charge outrageous fees for the transmission of knowledge. He called his discovery “a perpetual financing machine”.

He also realised that he could capture other people’s labour and resources for nothing. Governments funded the research published by his company, Pergamon, while the scientists who wrote the articles, reviewed them and edited the journals did so for free. His business model relied on the enclosure of common and public resources. Or, to use the technical term, daylight robbery.

As his other ventures ran into trouble, he sold his company to the Dutch publishing giant Elsevier. Like its major rivals, it has sustained the model to this day, and continues to make spectacular profits. Half the world’s research is published by five companies: Reed-Elsevier, Springer, Taylor & Francis, Wiley-Blackwell and the American Chemical Society. Libraries must pay a fortune for their bundled journals, while those outside the university system are asked to pay $20, $30, sometimes $50 to read a single article.

While open access journals have grown rapidly, researchers still have to read the paywalled articles in commercial journals. And, because their work is assessed by those who might fund, reward or promote them according to the impact factor of the journals in which they publish, many feel they have no choice but to surrender their research to these companies as well. Science ministers come and go without saying a word about this scam.

After my cancer diagnosis earlier this year, I was offered a choice of treatments. I wanted to make an informed decision. This meant reading scientific papers. Had I not used the stolen material provided by Sci-hub, it would have cost me thousands. Because, like most people, I didn’t have this money, I would have given up before I was properly informed. I have never met Alexandra Elbakyan, and I can only speculate about alternative outcomes, had the research I read not swayed my decision. But it is possible that she has saved my life.

Like people in many countries where scholarship is poorly funded, Elbakyan discovered that she could not complete her neuroscience research without pirated articles. Outraged by the journals’ padlock on knowledge, she used her hacking skills to share papers more widely. Sci-hub allows free access to 70 million papers, otherwise locked behind paywalls.

She was sued in 2015 by Elsevier, which won $15 million in damages, and in 2017 by the American Chemical Society, resulting in a $4.8 million judgement. These were civil cases, concerning civil matters. While the US courts have characterised her activities as copyright violation and data theft, to me her work involves the restoration to the public realm of property that belongs to us and for which we have already paid. In the great majority of cases, the research carried in these journals has been funded by taxpayers. Most of the work involved in writing the papers, reviewing and editing them is carried out at public expense, by people working at universities. Yet this public asset has been captured, packaged, and sold back to us for phenomenal fees. Those who must pay most are publicly-funded libraries. Taxpayers must shell out twice: first for the research, then to see the results. There might be legal justifications for this practice. There are no ethical justifications.

In any case, wherever Alexandra Elbakyan is (she lives in hiding), she is beyond the jurisdiction of the US courts. She moves Sci-hub between domains as it gets taken down. The numerous attempts to intimidate her have failed. One woman, with a small amount of crowdfunding, has smashed the wall erected by a $19 billion industry.

Of course, she is by no means the only person to have challenged the big publishers. The Public Library of Science, founded by researchers who objected not only to the industry's denial of public access but also its slow, antiquated and clumsy modes of publishing that hold back scientific research, has demonstrated that you don't need pay walls to produce excellent journals. Advocates like Stevan Harnad, Bjorn Brembs, Peter Suber and Michael Eisen have changed the public mood. The brilliant online innovator Aaron Swarz sought to release 5 million scientific articles into the public domain. Facing the possibility of decades in a US federal prison for this selfless act, he killed himself.

Among Alexandra Elbakyan's achievements is to empower libraries to confront the big publishers. Now they can refuse to renew contracts with the companies that had them over a barrel, as their users have another means of getting past the paywall. As the system has begun to creak, government funding agencies have at last summoned the courage to do what they should have done decades ago, and demand the democratisation of knowledge.

Last week, a consortium of European funders, including major research agencies in the UK, France, the Netherlands and Italy, published their "Plan S". It insists that from 2020 research we have already paid for through our taxes will no longer be locked up. Any researcher receiving money from these funders must publish her or his work only in open access journals.

The publishers have gone ballistic. Springer Nature argues that this plan "potentially undermines the whole research publishing system." Yes, that's the point. The publishers of the Science series, who appear to live in a Trumpian world in which reality is inverted and syntax is mangled, maintain that it would "disrupt scholarly communications, be a disservice to researchers, and impinge academic freedom". Elsevier says "If you think information shouldn't cost anything, go to Wikipedia", inadvertently reminding us of what happened to the commercial encyclopedias.

Plan S is not perfect, and the death of the knowledge monopolists has been predicted before. But this should be the beginning of the end of Maxwell's outrageous legacy. In the meantime, as a matter of principle, do not pay a penny to read an academic article. The ethical choice is to read the stolen material published by Sci-hub.

How many Wikipedia references are available to read? We measured the proportion of open access sources across languages and topics.

Share
A lock and chain hold a gate shut.
Let’s say you’re planning a trip to a subtropical region and you want to learn about available vaccines for yellow fever. You look up the English Wikipedia article. You’re lucky to find a well-sourced section, with a wealth of references, many of them pointing to information from public health agencies and reputable news articles. Great!

But then you decide to learn more about the scientific research on the treatment of yellow fever. You try to follow three citations, each a review article in a scholarly journal, and find that they’re all behind a paywall and inaccessible to you.

As it turns out, you’re not alone. When following a link to the official version of a scholarly article, Wikipedia readers are twice as likely to hit a paywall than one they can freely read.

Percentage of open citations

Citations are the bridge between Wikipedia articles and a broader landscape of reliable, secondary sources. Citations not only allow readers to verify the reliability of the facts they find in Wikipedia; through citations readers can also deep-dive into any given topic by exploring the books, scholarly publications, and news stories referenced in an article.

Wikipedia's use of open access sources—publications that can be accessed for free by anyone online[1]—plays a critical role in supporting fact-checking and in fostering digital literacy. Initiatives such as the Wikipedia Library's partnerships allow editors to gain free access to the paywalled literature, while automated tools such as OAbot help editors find openly accessible versions that can be added to Wikipedia article references. However, Wikipedia does not have policies that explicitly favor open access over subscription-based sources when citing information. In reality, Wikipedia still links both many paywalled and open access sources. How does this affect readers?

We recently released a dataset of all citations with identifiers in Wikipedia. This does not represent every single book, article, and website referenced on Wikipedia (more analysis of that to come), but the substantial subset of sources that have a code that uniquely identifies the work, such as a Digital Object Identifier (DOI) in the case of academic articles, or an International Standard Book Number (ISBN) for books. You might think of this large subset of citations as roughly representing the scholarly sources of Wikipedia. To estimate the proportion of these scholarly sources that are free to read, we are releasing a new dataset that sheds light on these citations by their accessibility level and topic.

To create this dataset, we cross-referenced our existing data with data provided by Unpaywall, a database gathering accessibility information of more than 19 million articles, and we associated each scholarly publication's digital object identifier (DOI) cited in Wikipedia with an accessibility label: "Open" if the publisher (source) provides a free copy, "Closed" if it is a paywalled publication, or "Available" if the official version is paywalled but there exists an open copy available elsewhere on the web (e.g., legally deposited by the author in a university repository). In total, we gathered accessibility values for around 450,000 scholarly publications cited across 300 Wikipedia languages.[2]

We find that less than half of the official versions of scholarly publications cited with an identifier in Wikipedia are freely available on the web: 29% are free-to-read at the source, while an additional 10% have a free-to-read version available elsewhere.[3]

Topic accessibility

The fraction of free-to-read content very much depends on the subject you're interested in. To explore the extent to which readers can access content without hitting a paywall depending on their interests, we characterized each publication with a topic category by looking at the main topic of the Wikipedia pages that cite a publication. We then used the draftopic tool to assign a Wikipedia page with a topic from the Wikiproject Hierarchy. Since the tool works for English Wikipedia only, we assign topics to pages from non-English Wikipedias by finding their corresponding English Wikipedia version through Wikidata.[4]

To explore this data at a glance, we published a number of visualizations through a Python notebook.

Wikipedia topics VS accessibility
Accessibility of publications cited in Wikipedia by article topic.
If you are passionate about space, you will have far more chances to freely access the sources of the Wikipedia articles you read: around 55% of publications in space-related articles are open. On the contrary, if you are interested in chemistry, you will very likely have to pay to read the publications cited in your favorite Wikipedia articles or rely on an institutional subscription: 83% of publications in chemistry articles across languages are paywalled.

Accessibility also varies significantly across languages. If you read Wikipedia in Belarusian, you will be linked to a wide number of free to read scholarly publications (around 45% are open). Conversely, if you only speak Khmer, only around 20% of the scholarly publications cited in your Wikipedia language edition can be freely accessed.

Wikipedia languages VS accessibility
Distribution of scholarly articles cited in each Wikipedia language edition by percentage of open access publications cited (left) and percentage of freely available paywalled publications cited (right). See our notebook visualizations for more comprehensive and interactive plots.
Beyond differences across topics and languages, our data also allows discovering areas of Wikipedia content that can be ‘un-paywalled’, i.e. topics for which we can improve the openness of referenced publications. For example, while articles in mathematics might not have a large amount of officially freely available sources (only 15%), we found that a larger proportion of publications in this field (25%) have a free copy available on the web. Similarly, Wikipedia in Punjabi is a language edition citing many paywalled sources (only 17% are open); however, around 24% of scholarly articles referenced in this language do have a non-paywalled version.

Exploring the data
Earlier this year, a team of developers from the Wikimedia Foundation, eLife and SAGE Publishing used the dataset to prototype a web-based tool called WikiCiteVis to search and visualize the world of Wikipedia citations. During the 2018 eLife Innovation Sprint, the team started working on the tool, and they have since produced a working web app that allows users to query the updated Wikipedia citation database in a browser, including links to Wikipedia articles and underlying cited articles. You can now see how a scholarly article or book is cited in Wikipedia using WikiCiteVis. Users are also welcome to provide feedback and suggest new features via GitHub, or to consider building these features themselves—find out more on eLife Labs.

You can access the full dataset of citations by topic and accessibility at https://doi.org/10.6084/m9.figshare.6819710. For our earlier data release and analysis of the most cited sources in Wikipedia, check out this blog post or read more in Wired and Nature.

We are also conducting research to understand how Wikipedia readers use citations (and why) and to identify when individual statements need additional citations. Stay tuned for further updates on these projects.

Footnotes
1. For the purpose of this analysis, we use the definition of “open” provided by Unpaywall, which refers to the accessibility of a scholarly article, not whether the article is published under free licenses that allow reuse. Studying the prevalence of free-licensed (or libre) open access citations is a challenge due to the lack of comprehensive data.

2. This analysis is limited to citations by DOI to assess the accessibility of a paper’s version of record. Citations templates often include additional links to accessible versions, when available.

3. In context, the practical accessibility of all citations on Wikipedia may be significantly higher. This dataset only contains citations with an identifier, which are much more common in scholarly journals (that are more likely to be paywalled). Many news websites or other types of source do not have an identifier (and are not in this dataset) but are free to access online.

4. Although this methodology gives us interesting insights on topic-accessibility, its main limitation is that we can assign a topic to a Wikipedia page only if it exists in English Wikipedia.

We owe you an explanation.
December 26: Fewer readers in the United States. Here's why:
You deserve an explanation, so please don't skip this 1-minute read. It's Friday, December 26 and while more people than ever rely on answers from Wikipedia, search tools make it less visible. With fewer readers this December, time is running out to hit our goal. We hope Wikipedia has given you at least $2.75 of knowledge this year. If everyone who finds Wikipedia useful gave $2.75, we'd hit our goal in a few hours.

It's been 25 years and Wikipedia is still free. It's still created by people, not machines, and we don't run ads or put up paywalls because we're not here to make a profit off your attention. In other words, it's still the internet we were promised.

Less than 2% of our readers donate, so if you have given in the past and Wikipedia still provides you with $2.75 worth of knowledge, donate today. If you are undecided, remember any contribution helps.

Digital object identifier

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This article is about a persistent identifier. For the use of digital object identifiers on Wikipedia, see Wikipedia:Digital Object Identifier. For other uses, see Doi (disambiguation).

Digital object identifier

Full name	Digital Object Identifier
Acronym	DOI
Organisation	International DOI Foundation
Introduced	October 1997; 28 years ago[1]
Example	10.1000/182
Website	www.doi.org/the-identifier/what-is-a-doi/ Edit this at Wikidata

A digital object identifier (DOI) is a persistent identifier or handle used to uniquely identify various objects, standardized by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO).[2] DOIs are an implementation of the Handle System;[3][4] they also fit within the URI system (Uniform Resource Identifier). They are widely used to identify academic, professional, and government information, such as journal articles, research reports, data sets, and official publications.

A DOI aims to resolve to its target, the information object to which the DOI refers. This is achieved by binding the DOI to metadata about the object, such as a URL where the object is located. Thus, by being actionable and interoperable, a DOI differs from ISBNs or ISRCs which are identifiers only. The DOI system uses the indecs Content Model to represent metadata.

The DOI for a document remains fixed over the lifetime of the document, whereas its location and other metadata may change. Referring to an online document by its DOI should provide a more stable link than directly using its URL. But if its URL changes, the publisher must update the metadata for the DOI to maintain the link to the URL.[5][6][7] It is the publisher's responsibility to update the DOI database. If they fail to do so, the DOI resolves to a dead link, leaving the DOI useless.[8]

The developer and administrator of the DOI system is the International DOI Foundation (IDF), which introduced it in 2000.[9] Organizations that meet the contractual obligations of the DOI system and are willing to pay to become a member of the system can assign DOIs.[10] The DOI system is implemented through a federation of registration agencies coordinated by the IDF.[11] The cumulative number of DOIs has increased exponentially over time, from 50 million registrations in 2011 to 391 million in 2025.[12] The rate of registering organizations ("members") has also increased over time from 4,000 in 2011 to 9,500 in 2013, but the federated nature of the system means it is not immediately clear how many members there are in total today.[13] Fake registries have even appeared.[14]

Nomenclature and syntax

A DOI is a type of Handle System handle, which takes the form of a character string divided into two parts, a prefix and a suffix, separated by a slash.

prefix/suffix

The prefix identifies the registrant of the identifier and the suffix is chosen by the registrant and identifies the specific object associated with that DOI. Most legal Unicode characters are allowed in these strings, which are interpreted in a case-insensitive manner. The prefix usually takes the form 10.NNNN, where NNNN is a number greater than or equal to 1000, whose limit depends only on the total number of registrants.[15][16] The prefix may be further subdivided with periods, like 10.NNNN.N.[17]

For example, in the DOI name 10.1000/182, the prefix is 10.1000 and the suffix is 182. The "10" part of the prefix distinguishes the handle as part of the DOI namespace, as opposed to some other Handle System namespace,[A] and the characters 1000 in the prefix identify the registrant; in this case the registrant is the International DOI Foundation itself. 182 is the suffix, or item ID, identifying a single object (in this case, the latest version of the DOI Handbook).

DOI names can identify creative works (such as texts, images, audio or video items, and software) in both electronic and physical forms, performances, and abstract works[18] such as licenses, parties to a transaction, etc.

The names can refer to objects at varying levels of detail: thus DOI names can identify a journal, an individual issue of a journal, an individual article in the journal, or a single table in that article. The choice of level of detail is left to the assigner, but in the DOI system it must be declared as part of the metadata that is associated with a DOI name, using a data dictionary based on the indecs Content Model.

Display

The official DOI Handbook explicitly states that DOIs should be displayed on screens and in print in the format doi:10.1000/182.[19]

Contrary to the DOI Handbook, Crossref, a major DOI registration agency, recommends displaying a URL (for example, https://doi.org/10.1000/182) instead of the officially specified format.[20][21] The DOI Foundation guarantees these URLs to be persistent[22] i.e. such URLs are PURLs — providing the location of a name resolver which will redirect HTTP requests to the correct online location of the linked item.[10][23]

The Crossref recommendation is primarily based on the assumption that the DOI is being displayed without being hyperlinked to its appropriate URL—the argument being that without the hyperlink it is not as easy to copy-and-paste the full URL to actually bring up the page for the DOI, thus the entire URL should be displayed, allowing people viewing the page containing the DOI to copy-and-paste the URL, by hand, into a new window/tab in their browser in order to go to the appropriate page for the document the DOI represents.[24]

Content
Major content of the DOI system currently includes:

Scholarly materials (journal articles, books, ebooks, etc.) through Crossref, a consortium of around 3,000 publishers; Airiti, a leading provider of Chinese and Taiwanese electronic academic journals; and the Japan Link Center (JaLC)[25] an organization providing link management and DOI assignment for electronic academic journals in Japanese.
Research datasets through DataCite, a consortium of leading research libraries, technical information providers, and scientific data centers;
European Union official publications through the EU publications office;
The Chinese National Knowledge Infrastructure project at Tsinghua University and the Institute of Scientific and Technical Information of China (ISTIC), two initiatives sponsored by the Chinese government.
Permanent global identifiers for both commercial and non-commercial audio/visual content titles, edits, and manifestations through the Entertainment ID Registry, commonly known as EIDR.
In the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's publication service OECD iLibrary, each table or graph in an OECD publication is shown with a DOI name that leads to an Excel file of data underlying the tables and graphs. Further development of such services is planned.[26]

Other registries include Crossref and the multilingual European DOI Registration Agency (mEDRA).[27] Since 2015, RFCs can be referenced as doi:10.17487/rfc....[28]

Features and benefits
The IDF designed the DOI system to provide persistent identification. Each DOI name permanently and clearly identifies the object it belongs to (although when the publisher of a journal changes, sometimes all the DOIs will be changed, with the old DOIs no longer working). It also associates metadata with objects, allowing it to provide users with relevant pieces of information about the objects and their relationships. Included as part of this metadata are network actions that allow DOI names to be resolved to web locations where the objects they describe can be found. To achieve its goals, the DOI system combines the Handle System and the indecs Content Model with a social infrastructure.

The Handle System ensures that the DOI name for an object is not based on any changeable attributes of the object such as its physical location or ownership, that the attributes of the object are encoded in its metadata rather than in its DOI name, and that no two objects are assigned the same DOI name. Because DOI names are short character strings, they are human-readable, may be copied and pasted as text, and fit into the URI specification. The DOI name-resolution mechanism acts behind the scenes, so that users communicate with it in the same way as with any other web service; it is built on open architectures, incorporates trust mechanisms, and is engineered to operate reliably and flexibly so that it can be adapted to changing demands and new applications of the DOI system.[29] DOI name-resolution may be used with OpenURL to select the most appropriate among multiple locations for a given object, according to the location of the user making the request.[30] However, despite this ability, the DOI system has drawn criticism from librarians for directing users to non-free copies of documents, that would have been available for no additional fee from alternative locations.[31]

The indecs Content Model as used within the DOI system associates metadata with objects. A small kernel of common metadata is shared by all DOI names and can be optionally extended with other relevant data, which may be public or restricted. Registrants may update the metadata for their DOI names at any time, such as when publication information changes or when an object moves to a different URL.

The International DOI Foundation (IDF) oversees the integration of these technologies and operation of the system through a technical and social infrastructure. The social infrastructure of a federation of independent registration agencies offering DOI services was modelled on existing successful federated deployments of identifiers such as GS1 and ISBN.

Comparison with other identifier schemes

A DOI name differs from commonly used Internet pointers to material, such as the Uniform Resource Locator (URL), in that it identifies an object itself as a first-class entity, rather than the specific place where the object is located at a certain time. It implements the Uniform Resource Identifier (Uniform Resource Name) concept and adds to it a data model and social infrastructure.[32]

A DOI name also differs from standard identifier registries such as the ISBN, ISRC, etc. The purpose of an identifier registry is to manage a given collection of identifiers, whereas the primary purpose of the DOI system is to make a collection of identifiers

The DOI system offers persistent, semantically interoperable resolution to related current data and is best suited to material that will be used in services outside the direct control of the issuing assigner (e.g., public citation or managing content of value). It uses a managed registry (providing both social and technical infrastructure). It does not assume any specific business model for the provision of identifiers or services and enables other existing services to link to it in defined ways. Several approaches for making identifiers persistent have been proposed.

The comparison of persistent identifier approaches is difficult because they are not all doing the same thing. Imprecisely referring to a set of schemes as "identifiers" does not mean that they can be compared easily. Other "identifier systems" may be enabling technologies with low barriers to entry, providing an easy to use labeling mechanism that allows anyone to set up a new instance (examples include Persistent Uniform Resource Locator (PURL), URLs, Globally Unique Identifiers (GUIDs), etc.), but may lack some of the functionality of a registry-controlled scheme and will usually lack accompanying metadata in a controlled scheme.

The DOI system does not have this approach and should not be compared directly to such identifier schemes. Various applications using such enabling technologies with added features have been devised that meet some of the features offered by the DOI system for specific sectors (e.g., ARK).

A DOI name does not depend on the object's location and, in this way, is similar to a Uniform Resource Name (URN) or PURL but differs from an ordinary URL. URLs are often used as substitute identifiers for documents on the Internet although the same document at two different locations has two URLs. By contrast, persistent identifiers such as DOI names identify objects as first class entities: two instances of the same object would have the same DOI name. In May, 2024, an Internet Draft was introduced to register the "doi" scheme,.[34] Many experts were not aware of this draft,[35] and the latest draft has currently expired.

Resolution

To resolve a DOI name, it may be input to a DOI resolver, such as one at the official website https://doi.org/.

DOI name resolution is provided through the Handle System, which is an infrastructure developed and operated by CNRI (Corporation for National Research Initiatives), and is freely available to any user encountering a DOI name. Resolution redirects the user from a DOI name to one or more pieces of typed data: URLs representing instances of the object, services such as e-mail, or one or more items of metadata. To the Handle System, a DOI name is a handle, and so has a set of values assigned to it and may be thought of as a record that consists of a group of fields. Each handle value must have a data type specified in its <type> field, which defines the syntax and semantics of its data. While a DOI persistently and uniquely identifies the object to which it is assigned, DOI resolution may not be persistent, due to technical and administrative issues.

Another approach, which avoids typing or copying and pasting into a resolver is to include the DOI in a document as a URL which uses the resolver as an HTTP proxy, such as https://doi.org/ (preferred)[36] or http://dx.doi.org/, both of which support HTTPS. For example, the DOI 10.1000/182 can be included in a reference or hyperlink as https://doi.org/10.1000/182. This approach allows users to click on the DOI as a normal hyperlink. Indeed, as previously mentioned, this is how Crossref recommends that DOIs always be represented (preferring HTTPS over HTTP), so that if they are cut-and-pasted into other documents, emails, etc., they will be actionable.

An interesting consequence of the fact that DOIs depend entirely on CNRI's Handle System infrastructure (whereby CNRI operates the global root servers and wrote the protocol) is that the proxy services DOI.org/<#> and hdl.handle.net/<#> are interoperable. For example, the following URIs resolve to the same publication:
https://doi.org/10.1016/S0021-9258(19)52451-6
https://hdl.handle.net/10.1016/S0021-9258(19)52451-6

There are other DOI resolvers and HTTP Proxies apart from NCRI's Handle System. At the beginning of the year 2016, a new class of alternative DOI resolvers was started by http://doai.io/ (now discontinued [37]). This service was unusual in that it tried to find a non-paywalled (often author archived) version of a title and redirected the user to that instead of the publisher's version.[38] Since then, other open-access favoring DOI resolvers have been created, notably https://oadoi.org/ in October 2016[39] (rebranded in 2017 as https://unpaywall.org/). While traditional DOI resolvers solely rely on the Handle System, alternative DOI resolvers first consult multiple Open Access resources such as institutional libraries with the Open Archives Initiative Protocol for Metadata Harvesting (OAI-PMH), or indexing services based in OAI-PMH, such as BASE (Bielefeld Academic Search Engine).[37][39]

An alternative to HTTP proxies is to use one of a number of add-ons and plug-ins for browsers, thereby avoiding the conversion of the DOIs to URLs,[40] which depend on domain names and may be subject to change, while still allowing the DOI to be treated as a normal hyperlink. A disadvantage of this approach for publishers is that, at least at present, most users will be encountering the DOIs in a browser, mail reader, or other software which does not have one of these plug-ins installed.

IDF organizational structure
International DOI Foundation

Logo of the foundation
Company type 501(c)(6) organization
Founded October 10, 1997; 28 years ago
The International DOI Foundation (IDF), a non-profit organization created in 1997, is the governance body of the DOI system.[41] It safeguards all intellectual property rights relating to the DOI system, manages common operational features, and supports the development and promotion of the DOI system. The IDF ensures that any improvements made to the DOI system (including creation, maintenance, registration, resolution and policymaking of DOI names) are available to any DOI registrant. It also prevents third parties from imposing additional licensing requirements beyond those of the IDF on users of the DOI system.

The IDF is controlled by a Board elected by the members of the Foundation, with an appointed Managing Agent who is responsible for co-ordinating and planning its activities. Membership is open to all organizations with an interest in electronic publishing and related enabling technologies. The IDF holds annual open meetings on the topics of DOI and related issues.

Registration agencies, appointed by the IDF, provide services to DOI registrants: they allocate DOI prefixes, register DOI names, and provide the necessary infrastructure to allow registrants to declare and maintain metadata and state data. Registration agencies are also expected to actively promote the widespread adoption of the DOI system, to cooperate with the IDF in the development of the DOI system as a whole, and to provide services on behalf of their specific user community. A list of current RAs is maintained by the International DOI Foundation. The IDF is recognized as one of the federated registrars for the Handle System by the DONA Foundation (of which the IDF is a board member), and is responsible for assigning Handle System prefixes under the top-level 10 prefix.[42]

Registration agencies generally charge a fee to assign a new DOI name; parts of these fees are used to support the IDF. The DOI system overall, through the IDF, operates on a not-for-profit cost recovery basis.

Standardization

The DOI system is an international standard developed by the International Organization for Standardization in its technical committee on identification and description, TC46/SC9.[43] The Draft International Standard ISO/DIS 26324, Information and documentation – Digital Object Identifier System met the ISO requirements for approval. The relevant ISO Working Group later submitted an edited version to ISO for distribution as an FDIS (Final Draft International Standard) ballot,[44] which was approved by 100% of those voting in a ballot closing on 15 November 2010.[45] The final standard was published on 23 April 2012.[2]

DOI is a registered URI under the info URI scheme specified by IETF RFC 4452.[46] info:doi/ is the infoURI Namespace of Digital Object Identifiers.[47]

The DOI syntax is a NISO standard, first standardized in 2000, ANSI/NISO Z39.84-2005 Syntax for the Digital Object Identifier.[48]

The maintainers of the DOI system have registered a DOI namespace for URNs.[49]

Text & Data Mining

LIBER believes that libraries and their users should be empowered to contribute to an innovative and competitive Europe.

That is why we are actively advocating for a more flexible copyright system that will allow text and data mining to be used to its full potential.

What is text and data mining?
“Text and data mining (TDM) is the process of deriving information from machine-read material. It works by copying large quantities of material, extracting the data, and recombining it to identify patterns.” – UK Government

There are four stages to the TDM process. First, potentially relevant documents are identified. These documents are then turned into a machine-readable format so that structured data can be extracted. The useful information is extracted (Stage 3) and then mined (Stage 4) to discover new knowledge, test hypotheses, and identify new relationships.

Image credit: JISC / Value and Benefits of Text Mining (2012)
Image credit: JISC / Value and Benefits of Text Mining (2012)
Why Is It Important?
TDM will increase the progress of science exponentially. It has the potential to facilitate the discovery of cures for diseases such as cancer and Parkinson’s. It has already been used to discover how existing drugs can be used to treat other conditions. It will also act as a foundation for innovation and new industry.

For libraries, who provide access to a growing amount of scientific content, it means that the researchers we support will be able to fully realise the value of the content we hold. This will, in turn, ensure a more rigorous approach to research, including more through reviews of the literature.

How is LIBER helping?
We are collaborating with a number of influential organisations and individuals to ensure that the European Union hears our call for legislative change that will better enable text and data mining.

We clearly expressed our views in our response to the EU's 2014 copyright review. We have participated in and then withdrew from the Licenses for Europe process when it became clear that there were serious concerns about the scope, composition and transparency of the process.
Our withdrawal was preceded by a letter of concern sent to the European Commission, to express the need for a more flexible copyright system. This letter was supported by over 60 influential organisations and individuals, representing researchers, science organisations and industry (read the EC's response).

In London, we organised a workshop The Perfect Swell to highlight the future potential and challenges related to TDM. We also produced a Factsheet on TDM, to make it easier for our members to understand and explain the importance of text and data mining to their professional and user communities.

Looking for a rare book/pdf
From my father, who is a scholar of the occult but not very savvy when it comes to torrents, etc. Can you guys help us?

I've been searching for the first two volumes of Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork by Harry Middleton Hyatt, printed by Western Publishing for the Memoirs of the Alma Egan Hyatt Foundation and distributed by the American University Bookstore back in 1970. Someone is selling scans on youtube for $500 each: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Lw84O3Mxlug. These must be out there somewhere in some torrent on the dark web - can you find them for me? I thought maybe the occult digimob would have them, but they look like they've gone belly up.

I don't know where you are, but I found this on Lucky Mojo:

"The bulk of the Hyatt collection is currently archived at the UCLA Center for the Comparative Study of Folklore and Mythology and in the Quincy [Illinois] University Department of Special Collections. "

So the UCLA Center for the Comparative Study of Folklore and Mythology has a link to a page where you can request to view their holdings if you know when you're going to be there.

Quincy University in Illinois has a whole frickin' Hyatt Folklore Collection. You can't look at the whole thing, but you can get permission to view some of it if you write ahead. Their webpage has contact info, but it's got to contain a copy of his best known books.

Family vacation?

Edit: Or go here and put in your zip code and it will tell you what nearby libraries have it. They catalog libraries worldwide.

I know that if a book is over 100 years old, it becomes open source.

That being said, Google has this thing called "The Guttenberg project", in which they scan all those open source books and you can view them for free. I would give that a try.

And if you know other languages, look for it in those languages.

"Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork"
by
HARRY MIDDLETON HYATT

Harry Middleton Hyatt was an Anglican minister who collected folklore as a hobby. Raised in Quincy, Illinois, Hyatt received his M.A. and D.D. at Kenyon College and Oxford University. He served as assistant rector at the Church of the Holy Spirit in New York City from 1951 to 1965. After his retirement in 1965, he returned to his home-town of Quincy, Illinois.

As a folklorist, Hyatt began this work in his own home-town, and then proceeded onward to collect magical spells throughout the South. His two major works in this field were "Folklore From Adams County Illinois" (1935) and "Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork" (1970). In addition, Hyatt was also a genealogist who published two books on his own family, "The Millers of Millersburg Kentucky" (1929) and "Descendents of John Walton of Baltimore Co. Maryland and Harrison Co. Kentucky" (1950).

"FOLKLORE FROM ADAMS COUNTY ILLINOIS"
"Folklore From Adams County Illinois" (FACI) contains hundreds of simple spells, folk-magical beliefs, herb-based medical remedies, riddling rhymes, and folkloric tales. It consists of 10,949 entries on 723 pages, including an index. It was self-published by Hyatt in two editions, the first in 1935, and the second in 1965. Both editions were released under the imprint "Memoirs of the Alma C. Hyatt Foundation." Alma C. Hyatt was his wife. The second edition contains a lengthy illustrated appreciation of the then-late Alma Hyatt, in which Mr. Hyatt explains to the world what an inspiration she was to him.

The section of "Folklore From Adams County Illinois" that deals with witchcraft is the most useful part of the book. It is comprised of brief quotes from unnamed local folks to whom Hyatt assigned cultural ascriptions (e.g. "Irish," "German," "Negro," etc.) so that one can place the speakers in the traditions from which they come. Unfortunately, as Hyatt explains in his preface, the material was edited and "omission of Negro dialect means that colored folk speak the same language as their white neighbors" with the exception of "a small vocabulary peculiar to themselves [of which] examples occur frequently in the text." Even more inexplicably, all "lore definitely Jewish was excluded [and] the same is true of three or four Indian [Native American] sayings." Furthermore, Greeks and Italians living in the area, according to Hyatt, "are newcomers, and have not been approached for folk-lore." Such egregious editorial deletions blemish what would otherwise be a balanced representation of folk-magical practices in Illinois at that time, but if one keeps these exclusions in mind, "Folklore From Adams County Illinois" is still a valuable document. The lengthy section on African-American hoodoo spells, and the unique quality of these spells, is what led Hyatt to undertake his later, more massive, work of hoodoo folk-magic collection in the South.

I am often asked what the differences are between the 1935 and 1965 editions of "Folklore from Adams County Illinois" (FACI). Basically -- they are different, period. The 1935 edition is easier to read (it is a typeset octavo volume), but the 1965 edition is MASSIVE -- presented in typewriter type, like the later "Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork" books, and matching them in size and binding. Additionally, the 1965 FACI is the only place where you can learn more about Hyatt himself -- for it contains a section printed on glossy paper in which he describes his life and his relationship with his wife Alma, who was his muse and financial supporter throughout his long years of dedicated folklore collecting.

The other question often asked is "Why do i need to read FACI when it is not about hoodoo?"

False premise!

A great deal of FACI is in fact about hoodoo.

FACI represents the largest attempt ever to catalogue ALL the beliefs of ALL the people living in one region (Adams County Illinois, like the title says). There are oversights -- Hyatt refused to collect material from Jews or Native Americans, for reasons that defy rationality at this point -- but there were plenty of black people in Adams County, and Hyatt collected all of their hoodoo beliefs, spells, and practices in FACI, and labelled them "Negro" for ease of extraction by researchers.

It was Hyatt's realization that Negro magical beliefs differed greatly from his own English American culture's beliefs that led him to go South and work on "Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork", the largest collection of folklore from one cultural group in America.

But FACI is not only important because it served as Hyatt's introduction to hoodoo -- it is also the most thorough and factual record of Irish, English, German, and other white European magical beliefs in America ever assembled, and, as such, it deserves a place on the shelf of any American Neo-Pagan, Wiccan, Fam-Trad or Pow Wow Magic practitioner.

"HOODOO - CONJURATION - WITCHCRAFT - ROOTWORK"

"Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork" (HCWR) is a 5-volume, 4766-page collection of folkloric material gathered by Hyatt in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia between 1936 and 1940. Supplementary interviews were conducted in Florida in 1970.

The "Hoodoo" collection consists of 13,458 separate magic spells and folkloric beliefs, plus lengthy interviews with professional root doctors, conjures, and hoodoos. All but one of Hyatt's 1600 informants were African-Americans, but several narrations by European-Americans (collected for his earlier book, "Folklore From Adams County, Illinois") were also included. Hyatt recorded the material on Edison cylinders and a device called a Telediphone, often without the full knowledge of the participants. He then transcribed and annotated it for publication. Occasionally his equipment failed or was not available and he took hand-written notes instead. The 1930s field recordings have since been destroyed, with the exception of a few cylinders that Hyatt had pressed onto 78 rpm records. The Florida interviews of 1970, recorded on cassette tapes, have survived.

As if to overcome the ham-fisted linguistic editing of Negro dialect that marred "Folklore From Adams County Illinois," this time Hyatt transcribed the speech of his informants semi-phonetically. What may look to modern eyes like "racial stereotyping" or making fun of Southerners was actually his sincere attempt to catalogue variant regional pronunciations. If you read several spells, you will see that he did NOT impose upon his informants one single stereotyped "black dialect" or "Southern dialect" but in fact conveyed, as accurately as he could, the true sound of each person's speech. Reading the spells aloud and noting the location where each informant lived will help you comprehend this. I do not intend to apologize for Hyatt's technique, and i hope that future scholars will not do so either.

The publication of this material was accomplished between 1970 and 1978, again under the imprint "Memoirs of the Alma C. Hyatt Foundation." The first two volumes were issued as a set in 1970, and said to be complete, but then, after a few years, three more volumes were released. Hyatt died before the sixth volume, an index, was prepared.

The contents of "Hoodoo - Conjuration - Witchcraft - Rootwork" are about as follows (numbers in parentheses are page number):

Volume Six:

the index, was in preparation when Hyatt died and it was never released, leading to the frustrating condition of the material as it now stands. However, as i use extracts from Hyatt's material in my own work, i create html cross-links between pages. This will, in effect, help generate an indexed database. In addition, i have placed online an index to the names and residential locations of Hyatt's informants, for the convenience of people interested in the broader areas of African-American genealogy and material culture during the 1930s.

MY DEBT TO HARRY M. HYATT

Like almost everyone who has followed in Hyatt's shoes, i owe him a debt for his dedication and perseverance in collecting so much magical lore and making it available to all. Although i began my own research into hoodoo in the early 1960s, before the reprint of FACI or the first volumes of HCWR were published, i found Hyatt's work invaluable from the time i first read it. I have made some use of his material to bolster my own presentations, and, for those who are interested, here is a list of Hoodoo in Theory and Practice web pages that contain quoted passages from Harry Hyatt's research:

Aunt Caroline Dye of Newport, Arkansas
Bluestone and Mexican Blue Anil Balls
Body Fluids: Menstrual Blood, Urine, Semen
Crossroads Rituals
Devil's Shoestring Foot Track Magic

Goofer Dust
Hoodoo History and Definition of Terms
Hoyt's Cologne
Hyatt's African-American informants
Madam Myrtle Collins of Memphis, Tennessee Nation Sack
Protection Spells
Salt
Secrets of the Psalms
Silver Dimes

As you run across Hyatt material at this site, please note:

1) All the transcribed spells quoted in Hoodoo in Theory and Practice are from the 1936-1940 "Hoodoo" sessions unless otherwise noted.
2) The number at the beginning, if any, is Hyatt's spell number. (Interviews were not numbered.)

3) Code numbers at the end of a spell are Hyatt's identification of the informants and the number of the recording cylinder itself.

4) Any words in (parentheses) in the text were spoken aloud by Hyatt during the interviews and any words in [brackets] were his written commentary to the publication. MY OWN further comments, if any, appear in {italics in curly brackets}, and most of them consist of additional information or corrections to Hyatt's characteristic transcription errors (e.g. his invariable mis-transcription of Hoyt's Cologne as "Hearts Cologne" or "herts perfume").

5) I have occasionally broken some of the book's run-on paragraphs into shorter chunks, for easier reading.

Whats your opinion on the Seth Material written by Jane Roberts ?
I've been reading the Seth Material off and on for the last 1-2 years, and find it quite spiritually empowering. What do you guys think about it ? Would really love to hear people's personal experiences with the teachings contained in it ! :) Or if you have any other opinions.

I've read all of the Seth books over the years, starting in the 70s. I believe they answer all of my questions about life/lives and what we are doing here.

I've only read Seth Speaks: The Eternal Validity of the Soul, but I really enjoyed it.

I think 'spiritually empowering' is a great way to describe my own thoughts on the material. Whether Jane was a nut or actually channeling an entity, who knows.

I've been meaning to acquire the other books and read them as well, I just haven't got around to it.

Yeah, thats a bit how I tend to perceive it as well. I think we can only judge from what she wrote , and what she wrote is immensely powerful stuff (in my opinion) .

I know I am a little late here, but this is the only Seth related thread I could find on Reddit.

I am a 28 year old PhD student in biomedical engineering; a scientific minded person, but have always been fascinated by dreams and consciousness (things that scientists seems to avoid or are not ready to address). My Dad introduced me to the Seth Material a while ago and it was definitely something that resonated with my interests. I just started getting back into it and will give my opinion.

The Material is so well spoken. One really gets the feel that "something" who understands reality at a deeper level is trying to explain it to us with good intentions.

It creates some connections between science and spirituality, which is something I believe is important in better understanding of reality.

There are plenty of compelling examples and thought experiments provided that help associate the concepts presented with modern daily life.

It seems to complex to be a hoax, yet it is too unorthodox to gain traction in society which is unfortunate.

One negative is that sometimes I feel it is difficult for the information to have an impact in my daily life. It definitely changes the way I think about things, but I still find myself making decisions that dont take the information into account. Perhaps meditation is the only way to truly grasp the concept first hand, as I find myself trying to use logic to connect the pieces, like im reading a text book.

Another issue I have is I haven't encountered a more clear example of how you create your own reality, which is an important foundation of The Material. It is difficult to tell if Seth implies that our beliefs, emotions, and desires dictate where we find ourselves in life; or if we literally create the matter we observe. This also makes me think of quantum physics where particles exist as probabilities until they are observed and "materialized". I dont know! This is still unclear to me.

Anyways, some other authors (or teachers) I have found interesting are Ken Wilber, Jiddu Krishnamurti, Ervin Laszlo, and Deepak Chopra.

Glad to see others are interested in Seth. Keep reading! Keep thinking! What are you??

93 - My opinion reflects that of Crowley's from 1910 or so: "Since truth is supra-rational, it is incommunicable in the language of reason. Hence all mystics have written nonsense, and what sense they have written is so far untrue. Yet as a still lake yields a truer reflection of the sun than a torrent, he whose mind is best balanced will, if he become a mystic, become the best mystic."

Most people who "channel" are not active meditators or familiar with (let alone versed in) occult techniques, so they are not "still lakes" in that sense, and what they say may or may not be cool at parts but is generally too clusterfuck-y to be of any real, lasting worth.

I do not think he himself would have passed his own muster. In the end we all fall victim to our own biases and prejudices.

93 - Crowley was, at certain times of clarity, very aware of his own biases and tended toward self-criticism/skepticism and openness. Other times, not so much.

A boomer friend of mine used to live down the street from her and said she was a nice woman. Then one day my friend walked out and the house down the street was surrounded with cars. The Seth material had started to make the rounds. She said her neighbor remained nice but became ever weirder after that. My friend thought it was fascinating, since she's a social worker and counselor, but her verdict was that her neighbor had lost her mind. A pretty normal response, I think. The takeaway is that she never seemed like a con man to my friend, just a nut.

She says right in the introduction to The Nature of Personal Reality (could have the title wrong, it's been a long time) that she felt that 'seth' was an extension of her own creativity. Which I think was a fancy way of saying she understood she was making shit up as she went along, at least on some level.

I think you can waste a lot of time with that stuff, and if you look at what's it's wrought, it aint pretty, ie: The Secret, Eckhart Tolle, 'the law of attraction', and all the extended New Age commerce, etc...

It's exciting that Seth is being discussed on Reddit, regardless of intent. My intent is quite different than yours; I feel your interpretation is too limited. In the introduction to TNOPR, Jane writes: "Actually, I think that the selves we know in normal life are only the three dimensional actualizations of other source-selves from which we receive our energy and life. Their reality can't be contained in the framework of our creaturehood, though it is being constantly translated through our present individuality."

Haven't read the Seth books specifically, I have read the Conversations With God books by Neale Donald Walsch which I imagine is probably pretty similar though, so I can just give broad overarching opinions.

Personally I think the majority of people who claim to be channellers (Jane Roberts, Neale Donald Walsch, etc) are either delusional or intentionally being fraudulent, leaning toward just delusional. Ie. they are not actually in contact with any entity. The majority of the things written in such states are just philosophical ideas like anyone would expect upon deep meditation, the same new-age crap people bring back from drug trips.

Of course most people here doing scrying, automatic writing, etc are doing the same things, so it really comes down to your opinion on whether these techniques actually put you in contact with sentient entities or only work through internal psychology.

My opinion...

If you are in contact with an omnipotent being, prove it with very detailed and accurate predictions about the future, or verifiable proof that could not be messed with in advance.

If you are in contact with non-omnipotent beings (ie. extraterrestrial), prove it by working with them to produce advanced technologies

If the entity can manifest things into your life that aren't verifiable... do it for yourself, teach others about it if you want, but don't waste your time trying to prove it

If the entity cannot provide any useful information (ie. the spirit of a dead human) - what is the point of it / what could you possibly gain aside from entertainment?

The 'Conversation with God' material is nothing like the Seth material IMO (I've read some of both). The Seth material I found to be profound and deeply interesting. I personally couldn't say the same thing with Neale Donald Walsch's material (though that kind of judgement is highly subjective)..

Edit: some context - I encountered the Seth Material, specifically 'The Nature of Personal Reality' and 'Seth Speaks' early on in my journey into consciousness and it's borderlands. I found it to be detailed, rich and illuminating of subjects and histories I had no idea nor opinion of at the time, with an emphasis on the creative and magical qualities of mind and becoming, as much as being. The 'Conversation with God' texts I encountered some decades later, after having woven through varying kinds of practices and experiences. It didn't seem so striking nor as detailed, perhaps more basic in its presentation of similar content. I couldn't get any further than the second book. Concepts I learned of through Seth/Jane Roberts still influence my world view and understanding today..

Thanks for sharing your opinion ! I think Jane might fall into the 3rd category a bit, her claims might not have been verifiable in the scientific physicalist sense, but she did practice and teach it to others without getting into trying to prove it too much (as far as I know).

BoTL has much data encoded into it as proof of dictation, If an entity/current/force chooses to use you as an avatar of expression there will generally be a verification beforehand.

Anyway the Seth material is not bad but it's just recycled mysteries

I’m 10 years late to this discussion, but here is my opinion on the Seth material: I have been a big fan and believer myself in new age, spirituality and the law of attraction. I believed that we created our own reality, through our thoughts and emotions. When I came by the Seth material, I started listening to the audiobook, and I was instantly hooked. I agreed on most things Seth said and I found it interesting how Seth explained that he had lived many lives on Earth, and now lived in another dimension, which does not require a body. I find it also very interesting how Seth tries to explain the beginning of the universe and God/Jesus.

Now later I understand the truth of the bible and how God himself came to Earth as Jesus Christ to save humanity from sin (hell) and showed us our true nature, which is kindness and compassion. We are created in God's image, and there is a plan for all of us. These teachings does not align with Seth's teachings, which is that you create your own reality and your thoughts manifest into reality. If God did not exist, it leads you to think that you need to make your own plan and do everything by yourself. Which is not true, because God did not create you without knowing his plan for you. I also wonder how Seth knows so much, from the beginning of the universe and so on. God is all knowing, and only God can know these things, otherwise he can give you access to information, but it is weird that Seth speaks on the existence of God without being all powerful and all knowing. Another thing here is that Seth speaks on Jesus Christ as being chosen by God randomly, and he was choosing Jesus because he was available at the time for him to be used as a messager. This is a lie. Jesus Christ is God himself. He was chosen before he was born.

Also the name Set (greek Seth) was a God of the deserts,storms,disorder, violence and and foreigners in ancient Egyptian religion. (Wikipedia)

The name chosen as Seth is interesting when you see the underlying meaning of the name.

I also want to say that most of the teachings seems to be very positive and uplifting. But that does not mean it is true. If Seth is speaking about the beginning of things, who God is, that Jesus Christ was randomly picked, and that the way of life is through your own ownership. This is not the way to salvation, that is actually telling you lies that sounds wonderful. The lies is always in the details. And we all know who the father of lies is? It is Satan himself. The truth will set you free.

Great -- now reverse the Seth material with the bible/Christianity. You could easily say the same thing about those beliefs, because they are just that -- beliefs. Your reasoning is all referential to a Christian framework, assuming it to be correct and "good." Seth never claims to be God, but the Christian God does. Does that mean we just accept and take it at face value? If so, why? Because it has been around longer? The "lies" you proclaim again assume the teachings of the bible to be true without question. On what authority? It's own authority?

I'm not trying to convince you that seth is right and the bible is wrong. But I think it is most important to understand for yourself what goodness is at its core before going to an outside source for information. Otherwise, you're doing it in reverse and trying to take away a core message that you don't have a foundation built for in yourself.

Well, magical thinking in government leads to oppression. I like my spirituality, but i wouldn't want to live in a world governed by witches. Secular rationalism is the only way to go.

Sorry, was that a rhetorical question?

Hey, I really appreciate you removing the racist books, but I have to ask where you found this stash, since I'd like to check the deleted books as well, or are they just not occult related in any way, in that case, nevermind. Also thanks for sharing, this looks interesting.

P.S.: "The Little White Book" on that drive looks like something you should delete.

Here's an article that talks about it some.

TL;DR White supremacists are looking for religions that justify their feelings of hatred/violence. Christianity is seen as a Jewish construct/very passive religion, while Odinism is seen as rewarding action in life.

Madame Blavatsky, Aleister Crowley and their work/teachings would 100% be called racist, xenophobic, far right, 'culture appropiating' white supremacist mansplaining fascists by todays 'liberals' and leftists. Just cause (for example) Nazi's did an (occult) study and came to a conclusion, doesnt mean the conclusion is faulty or the study is bad. I'm a bit bummed out that nearly this entire thread is so simple minded.

EDIT: I mean seriously, where do you think the occult third reich got their Aryan supremacist ideas from?

People can downvote that, but I don't really see anyone actually disputing it. With all this talk of how we need to just ignore anything messed up that people like Crowley did or said and only focus on the work that is useful, it does seem like most people will just pick and choose when that applies.

I get the feeling that none of you actually care about these "moral battles" at all. You can pretend to care, just like a bunch of kids tearing down a statue of some dead guy that liked slavery, all while recording the event on devices made by modern slaves. It's all about pretending to be a good person as long as it means never having to give up anything you care about.

The complete A.R.K. - drive (Occult Library) by Mark Passio available for download!
I regret to inform you that I've made the decision to stop seeding the ARK torrent. I cannot in good conscience with God share content that promotes such objectively false bunk as "Christ Conspiracy" and particularly "Zeitgeist" that contains claims NOT in accordance with TRUTH that have been debunked for over 10 years now. God of the bible is the one true God and everything one needs to know in order to get to know God and start fighting the spiritual warfare against one's flesh and the deincarnate "rulers of this world" can be found in the bible. I respect Mark Passio immensely but he has been blinded by the god of this world regarding the true nature of these deincarnate beings and their chief master, Satan (who deceiveth the whole world). Time is short, I urge everyone to get to know Jesus personally and to be filled with the Holy Spirit of God. You don't need to believe it, you can experience it for yourselves. We are living in end times and Jesus is coming back soon. The Mark of the Beast (the microship) will be forced upon people soon as many of you know.

ELI5: C.G. Jung "The Red Book" and his Liber series?
The biggest things I want to know is:

How and where did he start his "journey"

What was his end goal?

I am super broke and can't put out for all the books (especially because the last time I checked, the red book was expensive), so does anyone know if there are good (english) PDF's or audio books out there for free?

His journey started when his life began to fall apart in his early 30s. He had been hiding his mystical/occultist leanings, which were a HUGE part of his childhood (he came from a family full of supernatural, mystical, and psychotic influences), from his professional and academic peers as much as he could, but would discuss his ideas with his mentor and close friend Sigmund Freud. Freud and Jung disagreed about some important psychoanalytic theories, which, after 10 years of friendship, led to a violent end of the relationship, throwing Jung into a deep depression. Around the same time, Jung's marriage was falling apart, partly due to his open affair with a patient/student. He was also increasingly terrified at the prospect of WWI. This personal crisis is what catalyzed his descent into his unconscious. He decided to withdraw from teaching, quit his job at the mental hospital, and kept only a few patients, spending the next 2-3 years basically isolated and experimenting with his consciousness to trigger visions and hold conversations with the spirits he evoked, especially his main guardian and teacher, Philemon. Most of the Red Book was produced during this intensive period.

I don't think he had a specific one, and that they changed over time, depending on personal context and whatever new system of thought he was into. Some important goals: Discovering his personal mythology. Integrating the conscious and unconscious. Achieving self-realization. Being a channel for the birth of a new religion, for which he may or may not have been the messiah.

Already addressed.

This is more of the answer I was looking for :D. Also how did he start with his methods? Did he just kind of do trail and error stuff until he started having visions?

He had a natural, inherited inclination toward mystical/supernatura experience. Jung's maternal grandfather was a pastor and possible schizophrenic who "trained" his young daughter (Jung's mother) to ward off evil spirits while he worked on his sermons. As a child, Jung witnessed his mother in conversation with spirits in her room as he hid behind the door. This contrasted with the beliefs of his father, who was also a pastor and had Jung's mother sent to an asylum for long periods at a time. From an early age, Jung had an extremely active dream life, was a strong introvert who spent his free time communing with nature in the woods near his house, and developed many peculiar rituals to protect himself from negative influences. In school he realized he had the power to create and overcome his own neurosis, but he became convinced that he had two personalities: one, a regular Swiss child who followed the boring rules of society, and two, a mysterious 17th century nobleman who was wise and respected scholar with mystical powers (possibly influenced by the legacy of Jung's paternal grandfather, a famous Swiss physician, 33rd degree Freemason, and possible illegitimate child of Goethe). In college, Jung organized seances with his mother and cousin, who seemed a talented medium, to contact the spirit world, and learned how to put himself in a controlled trance and evoke hallucinations.

So you could say Jung was predestined to become who he was. I wrote a bio on Jung in college and obviously it was incredibly fascinating. It's also interesting to see how he changed after college:

Jung at one point realized that his cousin had been faking her medium experiences, after he caught her repeating some stories he had given her to read while she was supposedly channeling a spirit. He became disillusioned and wrote his master's thesis "On the psychology and pathology of so-called occult phenomena", in which he basically labelled his cousin as mentally ill and managed to hide all the details of his own involvement. Soon after this he got a job at a world-renowned mental hospital (Burgholzli), working under the "discoverer" of schizophrenia, Eugene Bleuler, and focused purely on mainstream psychiatry for years, in which he became a famous researcher in his own right. Only after meeting Freud later on did he become interested in psychoanalysis, which eventually led him to study the mythological content of schizophrenic hallucinations. This contributed to his theory of the collective unconscious ("how else could schizophrenics show similar thematology all over the world?") and, I think, gradually reawakened his interest in the occult. I think that tension between keeping up appearances as a mainstream psychiatrist but wanting to explore the deeper truths of mankind was a huge stressor on his psyche, so that when the dams finally burst, he did a complete 180 and got lost in his own mind for a good while. During his "confrontation with the unconscious" he refined his technique of "active imagination", which combined the trance techniques he already knew with the free association methods he had developed as a psychiatrist.

3) check your local library

See if your local library has an online catalog, and if you can reserve the book. I did this, and received notification that it was available for pick-up, went in and was shocked at how large it was. It's a beautiful book. By all means grab the torrent or a PDF version, but check out the real thing if you can, even if it's for 30 days -- it's fantastic. Good luck!

ELI5 CG Jung...

I found that a bit funny. Seriously though, if you haven't read it (given 1 and 2 I'm guessing not) I'd recommend reading 'Memories, Dreams, Reflections' first. It's a fairly short, casual read (most of his other publications are a lot more involving) wherein he describes much of his overall motivations (including those for Liber Novus) and methodology. I think it may also be available online. It's not where I started, but in retrospect IMO one of the best places for someone interested in Jung to start.

If you (or anyone else considering it) do want to get the Red Book, you may want a digital version. The actual book is so enormous as to be unwieldy - just reading it at home can be awkward, forget taking it anywhere. It's beautiful, but gigantic (worth the price IMO but also rather expensive). This is assuming that a digital has both the original and English translation and not just the translation (even if you don't know German I'd say it's worth having both).

I think even if you know German it would be pretty damn hard to read all that dense calligraphy!

At the point of questioning.

What do you do after you're enlightened? Now what? I think the non goal was his intent, that the point is simply change. And it's not better or worse, just different.

Favorite online occult resources
This has all probably been posted before but if not please feel free to add to the list so we can share!

[Sacred Texts] (http://www.sacred-texts.com/) : "the largest freely available archive of online books about religion, mythology, folklore and the esoteric on the Internet. The site is dedicated to religious tolerance and scholarship, and has the largest readership of any similar site on the web."

[Digimob] (http://digimob.forumotion.net/) A decent forum for all things occult AND if one were inclinded to download their torrent links one would have a whole library worth of information.

[Twilit Grotto: Archives of Western Esoterica] (http://www.esotericarchives.com/): A good mix of occult authors and topics

Works of Darkness
Hey guys, I need a pdf of this title by E.A Koetting (or any of his other works). His books are far too pricey. I want to try before I buy. Would anyone be willing to give me the link?

Something's wrong when I read works like this and I'm immediately reminded of things I myself have undergone.

Ok so a quick search shows that this guy has a "Buy my ebook!" site. I never trust those.

After a quick skim, it's really nothing out of the ordinary as far as common LHP writings go. It's a bit "Lulz, look how evels I is!" but no worse than a lot of other writings. Seems to be a lot of rehashed material, similar to Michael Ford's stuff or the Demonic Bible. If you're new to the LHP, it could be an ok introductory text I guess.

Definitely torrent rather than buy, maybe there'll be something of value in there.

I had a copy of his first edition Kingdoms of Flame that I put up on eBay some time back. Ended up getting over a grand for it. I was kind of shocked, actually.

Like attracts like. Work with darkness and you'll be surrounded by it. I can't think of a single good reason to immerse myself in such things.

Voici une collection OCCULTE ÉNORME de 465 Go. Magie, GD, Thélème, Tarot, Kabbale, Vidéos, Audios, PDF, etc... Tout. Ça marche pour moi sur uTorrent. C'est lent, mais ça marche. Je télécharge les 465 Go entiers. Prévoyez au moins 2-3 jours. D'abord, vous téléchargez le fichier Torrent. Ensuite, vous ajoutez le fichier Torrent localement et manuellement. En ce moment, il y a au moins 14 pairs et 11 semeurs.

Copier et coller :

Le problème avec beaucoup de ces téléchargements massifs de textes, c'est qu'ils sont remplis d'œuvres d'auteurs que beaucoup d'entre nous connaissent personnellement. Aucun auteur occulte ne gagne sa vie avec ses œuvres. Ils devraient au moins pouvoir être récompensés pour l'effort qu'il leur a fallu pour faire des recherches et écrire un livre. L'autre problème, c'est qu'il y a tellement de merde mélangée.

Je crois que le mien fait ~80 Go ; il y a tellement de trucs à trier là-dedans que ça prendrait des années et ça me qualifierait probablement pour un putain de doctorat en bibliothéconomie.

Édition, parce que je pense que c'est important de le noter : j'ai acheté des copies physiques de nombreux livres que j'ai trouvés utiles après les avoir lus en format électronique, parce que je veux soutenir le travail des auteurs.

Je me souviens être tombé sur une bibliothèque torrent similaire (Library v1.5) de cette envergure il y a des années, mais soyons honnêtes, est-ce que tu as vraiment besoin de télécharger une énorme bibliothèque si tu vas juste avoir besoin ou parcourir juste quelques textes ?

Je trouve que d'avoir des copies physiques de livres me forcerait à vraiment lire mes livres. Va soutenir les auteurs, mon pote.

Il y a beaucoup d'auteurs de merde qui écrivent des livres de merde. Il y a de très bons auteurs et malheureusement beaucoup d'auteurs qui sont pires qu'inutiles. J'ai plus de 200 vrais livres occultes "EN VERSION PAPIER" dans ma bibliothèque. J'aime bien les consulter AVANT d'acheter.

Tu parles de ce Torrent ? Ça a l'air super intéressant. Merci pour le tuyau. Library v1.5 (Fixed).torrent

https://www.mediafire.com/file/wv3gwdybuddgffz/Library_v1.5_%2528Fixed%2529.torre nt/file

Au fait, j'ai plus de 200 livres imprimés en dur dans ma bibliothèque occulte. Je soutiens fidèlement mes auteurs préférés. J'aime bien feuilleter mes livres avant de les acheter. Il y a tellement de merde et seule une petite partie de ce qui existe est bonne. J'aime bien regarder avant de sauter !

Sans tenir compte des problèmes de droits d'auteur d'un tel torrent. Quel est l'intérêt ? Tu vas lire quelque chose de tout ça ? Tu vas trouver un système à suivre pour travailler et maîtriser ?

Maintenant, les copies numériques de livres sont utiles (tu peux voyager plus facilement avec et c'est plus facile de citer si elles sont bien OCRisées). Mais une archive de 465 Go, c'est un peu comme aller dans une librairie d'occasion et acheter absolument tout, juste pour le fun.

Mais au final, je suppose que si ça te convient, c'est parfait :)

J'ai plus de 200 livres physiques "HARD COPY" réels sur l'Occulte dans ma bibliothèque. J'aime bien les consulter AVANT d'acheter. Il y a beaucoup de bouquins inutiles et pourris. Il y a de très bons auteurs et malheureusement beaucoup d'auteurs qui sont pires qu'inutiles.

La plupart des applications Torrent te permettent de sélectionner les dossiers et les fichiers que tu veux télécharger AVANT, comme ça tu perds pas de temps, de bande passante et d'espace disque sur des trucs que tu veux pas ou dont t'as pas besoin.

C'est tout à fait vrai. J'ai bien plus de 200 livres en version papier. Et parfois, oui, tu finis par faire des achats inutiles. Mais je suppose que c'est à ça que servent les critiques de blogs, Goodreads, les critiques Amazon et les recommandations d'amis. Et parfois, il faut juste se lancer.

Mais au final, je suppose que c'est ce qui marche pour toi :)

The complete A.R.K. - drive (Occult Library) by Mark Passio available for download!
I regret to inform you that I've made the decision to stop seeding the ARK torrent. I cannot in good conscience with God share content that promotes such objectively false bunk as "Christ Conspiracy" and particularly "Zeitgeist" that contains claims NOT in accordance with TRUTH that have been debunked for over 10 years now. God of the bible is the one true God and everything one needs to know in order to get to know God and start fighting the spiritual warfare against one's flesh and the deincarnate "rulers of this world" can be found in the bible. I respect Mark Passio immensely but he has been blinded by the god of this world regarding the true nature of these deincarnate beings and their chief master, Satan (who deceiveth the whole world). Time is short, I urge everyone to get to know Jesus personally and to be filled with the Holy Spirit of God. You don't need to believe it, you can experience it for yourselves. We are living in end times and Jesus is coming back soon. The Mark of the Beast (the microship) will be forced upon people soon as many of you know.

I regret to inform you that I've made the decision to stop seeding the ARK torrent. I cannot in good conscience with God share content that promotes such objectively false bunk as "Christ Conspiracy" and particularly "Zeitgeist" that contains claims NOT in accordance with TRUTH that have been debunked for over 10 years now. God of the bible is the one true God and everything one needs to know in order to get to know God and start fighting the spiritual warfare against one's flesh and the deincarnate "rulers of this world" can be found in the bible. I respect Mark Passio immensely but he has been blinded by the god of this world regarding the true nature of these deincarnate beings and their chief master, Satan (who deceiveth the whole world). Time is short, I urge everyone to get to know Jesus personally and to be filled with the Holy Spirit of God. You don't need to believe it, you can experience it for yourselves. Anyone know the artist? I had an astrology book years ago that was filled with this artist’s pictures and I’m trying to trace the artist and the book again. Ignore the text on it, I screenshot it from a video.

A small warning. PDF files can contain harmful code

No threats found.

I've ran ESET Endpoint against ALL files

No threats detected as well

Yet I would still recommend not using Windows PDF reader nor Adobe. Both allow pdf files to establish communication with the outside world to a certain extend and/or run code on local machine

Recommend using Sumatra PDF or Foxit PDF

Both pdf readers can't do sh*t, without user input.

For the super paranoid, running it within a VM environment without ethernet connection would be the best course of action.

I have a medium quality laptop made in 2011 (more or less) and with Adobe there was no way I could scroll smoothly in a big document.

I love foxit reader because it allows me to read pdfs like a normal person. And its auto scroll feature is awesome.

The structure of reality and it's laws, such as the law of vibration and how to use the vibrations of the mind to influence the vibrations of reality. The structures of energies that influence our life and how to utilize them. How to navigate other planes of existence. How the microcosm reflects the macrocosm. How to do inner work in order to complete self-actualization.

If you are interested I recommend the Kybalion it's about 40 pages and free online, written a hundred years ago anonymously.

Edit: also a lot of eastern esoteric books talk about achieving enlightenment and having a higher state of consciousness

The moon shouldn't be here. Period. All our sciences, religions and faiths fail to mention this little truth bomb. Everything from Newtonian theory of gravity to the Big Bang theory is part of a smoke-screen to keep us from seeing it for what it is.

The fabric of reality is threaded so fine, that even when presented with observable facts, people refuse to accept them as truth. We prefer exotic, exoteric explanations to simple, honest ones. We believe random luck is a creative force. We seem to thrive on mystery and unanswerable questions. The smarter and/or more educated we are, the less likely we are to accept cause-and-effect scenarios that we can observe with our own eyes.

Hollywood knows what's up with the moon. Remember how the Matrix ended? In the 'real world' they flew above the clouds and up into space, then they turned around and fell back down to Earth. They needed to 'see the moon' before they could be really effective. Tomorrowland's heroes followed the same template. Armageddon's, too.

There. You asked for it. Now go be a hero

Actually [/s], Yoga by definition is occult. It was a spiritual practice of monks. The "fitness" version we have now just stripped most of that away (although you will have more hippie practitioners still talking about chakras etc)

Hello! Since many esoteric writers like Blavatsky, Bailey, Lévi, Crowley, Pike,Paracelsus and Agrippa wrote in intentionally difficult or symbolic language meant only for initiates to grasp, what books would you recommend that cover similar ideas but are easier to read and understand?

I'm looking for some ANCIENT books.

Hello,

I'm looking for PDF or hard copies of the books below (PREFERABLY FREE):

Simon Necronomicon https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Simon_Necronomicon (YES, I KNOW THIS ISN'T ANCIENT - I'D LIKE TO READ IT ALL THE SAME)

The Prodigies Of Egypt

https://www.amazon.com/Prodigies-Egypt-Murtada-ibn-al-Afif/dp/1515177955

Akhbar Al Zaman (mentioned in The Prodigies of Egypt) The History of Time

The Book of the Son go Gnosis and the subtitles of elevated things.
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Shams_al-Ma%27arif

If you were able to link me to them, i'd be eternally grateful. Also, feel free to let me know about your experiences or chat about any of these books.

Check out the UK Publisher, 'Forgotten Books,' I stumbled upon them recently & is my first go-to for any searches of original texts and the inherent translations

https://www.forgottenbooks.com/en

If its not there....head to the Holy Grail of all ancient texts & closest thing we have to the Library of Alexandria itself IMO.....the Vatican Library's digital archive

https://forum.concen.org/content/magick-sorcery-occult-esoteric-hermetics-ebooks-archive-2015 at the bottom of the page you will find the torrent link :

https://concen.org/sites/default/files/torrents/Magick%20Sorcery%20Occult%20Esoteric%20Hermetics%20ebooks%20archive%202015.02.05.torrent

this torrent library contains Simon Necronomicon

you are going to need a torrent downloading software, and definitely a VPN if you live in a country where torrent download of copy right violating content is illegal.

I'm looking for some ANCIENT books.

Hello,

I'm looking for PDF or hard copies of the books below (PREFERABLY FREE):

Simon Necronomicon https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Simon_Necronomicon (YES, I KNOW THIS ISN'T ANCIENT - I'D LIKE TO READ IT ALL THE SAME)

The Prodigies Of Egypt
https://www.amazon.com/Prodigies-Egypt-Murtada-ibn-al-Afif/dp/1515177955

Akhbar Al Zaman (mentioned in The Prodigies of Egypt) The History of Time

The Book of the Son go Gnosis and the subtitles of elevated things.
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Shams_al-Ma%27arif

If you were able to link me to them, i'd be eternally grateful. Also, feel free to let me know about your experiences or chat about any of these books.

But it was real edgelord stuff when I bought my paperback copy at B. Dalton's in the mall in the early 80's during the satanic panic. :^)

https://www.forgottenbooks.com/en

If its not there....head to the Holy Grail of all ancient texts & closest thing we have to the Library of Alexandria itself IMO.....the Vatican Library's digital archive

The Simon Necronomicon is a grimoire attributed to "Simon", allegedly a pseudonym of writer Peter Levenda. Materials presented in the book are a blend of ancient Middle Eastern elements, with allusions to the writings of H. P. Lovecraft and Aleister Crowley, woven together with a story about a man known as the "Mad Arab".

The book was released in 1977 by Schlangekraft, Inc. in a limited edition hardback printing, followed by a paperback release by Avon Books, and a subsequent paperback release by Bantam Books.

Simon's introduction

The introduction to the book (comprising about 80 pages of a total of 263) is the only part that Simon claims to have written. It relates how Simon and his associates were introduced to a Greek translation of the Necronomicon by a mysterious monk. Simon claims that after experimenting with the text, they verified that the work is a genuine collection of magical rituals that predates most known religions, and warns that anyone attempting to use the Necronomicon may "unleash dangerous forces". The introduction attempts to establish links between H. P. Lovecraft, Aleister Crowley and ancient mythology (including Sumerian, Babylonian, Assyrian, and Chaldean myths and rituals), and draw parallels to other religions (such as Christianity, Wicca, Satanism and Hebrew Mythology). Some of the discussion is based on a supposed connection between Crowley and Lovecraft first espoused by Kenneth Grant.

"The Testimony of the Mad Arab"

In addition to an introduction, the book uses a frame story titled "The Testimony of the Mad Arab". The "Testimony" is in two parts, forming a prologue and an epilogue to the core Necronomicon. The author describes himself as a "Mad Arab".

The prologue explains how the Arab first came to discover the dark secrets that he is recording, accidentally witnessing an arcane ritual performed by a cult that worships Tiamat, in which both the demons Kutulu and Humwawa are conjured.

In the epilogue, the Mad Arab is haunted by premonitions of his gruesome death. He realizes that the horrors of the Necronomicon are enraged and seek revenge upon him for revealing their existence to the world. The text is littered with non sequiturs and arcane incantations, presented as indication of his unstable mental state and his desire to protect himself from perceived danger. He is unable to sign his work, and thus remains nameless.

Magic

Much of the book is a collection of magic rituals and conjurations. Many incantations and seals are described. Most of these are intended to ward off evil or to invoke the Elder Gods to one's aid. Some of them are curses to be used against one's enemies. The incantations are written in a mixture of English and more ancient languages, with a few possible misspellings in the romanization of the archaic words. There are also several words that do not appear to be from any known language.

The many magical seals in the book pertain to particular gods and demons, and are used when invoking or summoning the entity with which each is associated. In some cases there are specific instructions on how to inscribe the seals and amulets, including the materials that should be used and the time of day for their creation; in other cases, only the seal itself is given.

For some rituals, the book mentions that sacrifices should be offered. One ritual in particular describes a human sacrifice of 11 men, needed to enchant a knife that can summon Tiamat (pp. 160–161).

Both the introduction and the book's marketing make sensational claims for the book's magical power. The back blurb claims it is "the most potent and potentially, the most dangerous Black Book known to the Western World," and that its rituals will bring "beings and monsters" into "physical appearance". The book's introduction gives readers frequent warnings that the powers it contains are potentially life-threatening, and that perfect mental health is needed; otherwise the book is extremely dangerous. It claims a curse afflicted those who helped publish the book. It also claims that the Golden Dawn methods of magical banishing will not work on the entities in this book.

Textual authenticity

According to one book on the topic, The Necronomicon Files, several portions of the Necronomicon bear striking similarities to other works mentioned in its bibliography, such as R. C. Thompson's The Devils and Evil Spirits of Babylonia and James B. Pritchard's Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament — to an extent that it appears unlikely that separate translations could have arrived at the same result.[1] In addition, two members of the Magickal Childe scene, Khem Caigan (the Necronomicon's illustrator) and Alan Cabal, an American occultist, have independently stated that the book was widely known as a hoax in the local occult community and references Peter Levenda as the author.[2]

Owen Davies calls Simon Necronomicon "a well-constructed hoax",[3] but adds that making a grimoire by stitching together material from previous sources is a well-worn motif in grimoire history, and that "it is their falsity that makes them genuine." The same thing is pointed out by Dan Clore who writes[4] that the hoax Necronomicons are every bit as "authentic" as the Lesser Key of Solomon or the Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses.

Accusations of black magic and connections to murder

The book was featured as courtroom evidence in the murder trial of Rod Ferrell, with suggestions that it played a part in Satanic human sacrifices. Ferrell, it is claimed, used the book during cult rituals.[5]

Dead Names

In 2006, Avon published Simon's Dead Names: The Dark History of the Necronomicon (ISBN 0-06-078704-X), in which he details the history of the Necronomicon and attacks his critics who claim the book is a hoax. The book's conclusions are considered suspect by his critics.[6]

The Prodigies of Egypt Paperback – July 30, 2015
by Murtada ibn al-'Afif (Author), John Davies (Translator)
4.8 4.8 out of 5 stars (14)
Murtada ibn al-‘Afif, also known as Murtadi, son of Gaphiphus (1154 or 1155-1237 CE), was an obscure Arabian writer who studied in Alexandria, Damascus, and Cairo. While he is credited with having written many books, no titles survive, not even the original title of his only complete work to survive to modern times, the book known variously as the Egyptian History or the Prodigies of Egypt, which reported traditional folklore associated with the pyramids, the Flood, and the wonders of Egypt. In French and English translations (the Arabic original was lost) the Prodigies of Egypt influenced the English Romantics, and it preserves some legends of Egypt not found in other sources. This edition reprints the 1672 translation of John Davies to bring this medieval treasury to modern readers in its classic and widely-cited English translation.

5.0 out of 5 stars Interesting Collection of text
Reviewed in Australia on December 24, 2019
Format: PaperbackVerified Purchase
We can never be sure what has been lost to history, and little pieces remain from the deep past that sometimes surprise us. This book is supposedly one of those pieces. It reads surprisingly well given that it is apparently an older english translation (from 1672) of a much older text (according to common accounts the text was originally translated into french from arabic). The complete original (written between 1155-1237 BCE) being lost to the tides of time. It contain many interesting stories of Ancient Egyptian folklore (some of which is supposedly Pre-Flood) that isn't commonly supported by the established historical community. It is contain some very interesting myths and much like other ancient texts one cannot be truly sure where myth ends and truth begins. It remains an interesting cultural artefact that is worth reading.

Shams al-Ma'arif (The Book of the Sun of Gnosis)

The introduction of the Book A manuscript copy, beginning of 17th century
AuthorAhmad al-Buni (traditional attribution, possibly pseudepigrapha)
Language Arabic

Genre Occult treatise, Grimoire
OCLC 20121408
LC Class BF1771 .B8 Arab
Shams al-Ma'arif or Shams al-Ma'arif wa Lata'if al-'Awarif[a] is a grimoire centered on Arabic magic. It is claimed to be a manual for achieving esoteric spirituality. The work is included within the larger compilation Shams al-maʿārif al-kubrā, which is also known as the "Shams al-Ma'arif". Although widely attributed to the 13th century North African Sufi scholar Ahmad al-Buni, his authorship of the text is disputed and has been argued to be pseudepigraphic (falsely attributed).[1] The Shams al-maʿārif al-kubrā is a compilation work of a number of different authors, including some authentic work from al-Buni.[1][2] While being popular, it also carries a notorious reputation for being suppressed and banned for much of Islamic history.[3]

History
The authorship of the Shams al-Ma'arif wa Lata'if al-'Awarif was historically attributed to the North African late 12th- early 13th century Sufi scholar Ahmad al-Buni who purportedly wrote it while living in Central Maghreb (modern-day Algeria); he died around 1225 CE (622 AH).[4] However, Buni's authorship of the work is disputed. It has been suggested that another text, also known as the Shams al-Ma'arif found in the National Library of Damascus represents an authentic work of al-Buni, but its is very different from the more famous text of the same name, focusing on cosmology rather than magic, and works undoubtedly authored by al-Buni do not focus on magic, with the exception of Laṭāʾif al-ishārāt briefly mentioning esoteric properties of Arabic letters. Jean-Charles Coulon has argued that Shams al-Ma'arif wa Lata'if al-'Awarif cannot be an authentic work of al-Buni due to the presence of anachronisms within the text that are inconsistent with al-Buni's known authentic works, thus making it pseudepigrapha. Coulon argues that the work is part of a "corpus Buniam" of authors working in the tradition of al-Buni, some of which was falsely attributed to al-Buni himself. Al-Buni's reputation for esoteric magic was later further enhanced by the 15th century Ottoman scholar Abd al-Rahman ibn Muhammad al-Bistami, who extensively commentated on Buni's works, with a particular focus of al-Bistami being instructions for creating magical amulets and talismans. This was later followed by the composition of the expansive compilation work Shams al-maʿārif al-kubrā containing the Shams al-Ma'arif wa Lata'if al-'Awarif as well as other esoteric magic works including those by al-Bisṭāmī', alongside authentic texts by al-Buni himself, which circulated in elite circles of the Ottoman Empire.[1]

Scholars like Ibn Taymiyya have criticized the book and labeled the author, Al-Buni, as a deluded devil (Shaytan) worshipper;[5][6] However, it continues to persist, and is still being read in public and studied in the present day, despite its questionable reputation.[5][7] Some Sufi orders, such as the Naqshbandi-Haqqani order have occasionally recognised its potential spiritual value, provided that the reader understands it.[8]

After its first modern era printing in Beirut on 1985, the government of Saudi Arabia imposed a ban on the book.[9] Ibn Jibrin, a Saudi scholar member of the Council of

Senior Scholars and of the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta; has issued Fatwa which forbid certain books, including the Shams al-Ma'arif.[10][11]

In the 20th and 21st century AD, Shams al-Ma'arif grew in recognition and was adopted by the Order of Nine Angles, a global terrorist Satanist organization, as one of their influences.[12] Although a translation into English has not been undertaken, there have been numerous renditions of a few of the more popular rituals found within the main treatise, as well as those that lie in its accompanying text. Some of these rituals have had various degrees of notability, but one of recurring presence in many publications is that of the Birhatiya[13][14] (also known as The Ancient Oath or Red Sulphur[15]).

In 2022 a partial English translation by Amina Inloes was published by Revelore Press as "Shams al-Ma’arif: The Sun of Knowledge An Arabic Grimoire: A selected Translation"[16]

In 2023, another English translation of the Shams al Ma'arif was published by Johann Voldemont as "Shams al-Ma'arif: Talismans and Magic Squares" which focuses primarily on the talismans and magic squares contained within the text.[17] Outside of the Arab and Western world, several editions of the book have been published in the Urdu and Turkish languages.[18][19][20]

Content

An Algerian manuscript of the Shams al-Ma'arif from 1868, Khalili Collection of Islamic Art

In contemporary form, the book consists of two volumes, Shams Al-Ma'arif al-Kubra[b] and Shams Al-Ma'arif al-Sughra,[c] the former being the larger of the two.[21][22] The first few chapters introduce the reader to magic squares, and the combination of numbers and the alphabet that are believed to bring magical effect, which the author claims is the only way to communicate with Jinn, angels and spirits. The table of contents that was introduced in the later printed editions of the work contains a list of unnumbered chapters (faṣl), which stretch to 40. However, before the printing press and various other standardisations, there were three independent volumes that circulated, each one differing in length.[23]

Another title by the same author, namely Manba' Usul al-Hikmah "The Source of the Essentials of Wisdom", is considered its companion text.[citation needed]

The Temple of Solomon
This book delves into the fascinating history and significance of the Temple of Solomon, placing it within the broader context of ancient Semitic religions and cultures. The author explores the historical and cultural influences that shaped the Temple's construction, drawing parallels with architectural and religious practices in Phoenicia and Egypt.

The book challenges the notion of the Temple as a solely Jewish creation, highlighting the shared religious symbolism and architectural elements found throughout the ancient Near East. By examining the political and religious landscape of the time, the author sheds light on the Temple's role as a symbol of royal power and its evolution into a central place of worship for the Jewish people.

Through a meticulous analysis of biblical and historical sources, the author unravels the complexities of early Yahwism and its relationship to neighboring polytheistic religions. The book delves into the Temple's symbolism, exploring the significance of its design, decorations, and rituals.

Ultimately, this book offers a thought-provoking perspective on the Temple of Solomon, revealing its multifaceted nature as a product of cultural exchange, religious evolution, and political ambition. By understanding the historical and cultural context surrounding the Temple, readers gain a deeper appreciation for its enduring legacy and its impact on the development of Judaism.

My name's Julie and I've been running this site for around thirteen years. I format all the ebooks myself, as well as maintaining the website. This is an ongoing project that was born from a love of reading and a commitment to make ebooks that look good.

Notice
You may notice that some books on the site are no longer free. Over the past few months, donations have fallen sharply, and after much thought I’ve made the decision to charge a small fee for certain titles. This project has always been a labour of love, but the hours spent sourcing, reformatting, and preparing each ebook are considerable. Without some return, it simply became unrealistic to keep everything free.

I’ve run this site for 13 years, and I want it to continue - properly, sustainably, and with the same care it has always had. Unfortunately, there has also been a rise in people reselling my ebooks and even entire collections, which makes it even harder on a personal level to keep the project going as it was.

At the moment, only a few books have a modest fee, but over time (most likely months, it's slow going!) most titles will move to that model. I’ll keep a selection of shorter works free, and seeing as right now, 98% of books are still free, donations remain very much appreciated (and needed!). I’ll also continue adding new material. The recently introduced scanned-PDF section will grow as well; it allows me to share interesting books that would be too complex or time-intensive to transcribe, and these will remain free.

Thank you to everyone who has supported the site over the years. Your encouragement has meant more than you know. I hope you understand the need for this change, and I’m grateful for your continued support as the project moves into its next chapter.

The FAQ has been updated to include the new direction, in case you wanted a bit more info.

Mindset : The New Psychology of Success
Carol Dweck, Carol S. Dweck

Mindset is one of those rare books that can help you make positive changes in your life and at the same time see the world in a new way.A leading expert in motivation and personality psychology, Carol Dweck has discovered in more than twenty years of research that our mindset is not a minor personality quirk: it creates our whole mental world. It explains how we become optimistic or pessimistic. It shapes our goals, our attitude toward work and relationships, and how we raise our kids, ultimately predicting whether or not we will fulfill our potential. Dweck has found that everyone has one of two basic mindsets.If you have the fixed mindset, you believe that your talents and abilities are set in stone–either you have them or you don’t. You must prove yourself over and over, trying to look smart and talented at all costs. This is the path of stagnation. If you have a growth mindset, however, you know that talents can be developed and that great abilities are built over time. This is the path of opportunity–and success.Dweck demonstrates that mindset unfolds in childhood and adulthood and drives every aspect of our lives, from work to sports, from relationships to parenting. She reveals how creative geniuses in all fields–music, literature, science, sports, business–apply the growth mindset to achieve results. Perhaps even more important, she shows us how we can change our mindset at any stage of life to achieve true success and fulfillment. She looks across a broad...Read more…

The Mountain Is You : Transforming Self-Sabotage Into Self- Ma stery Brianna Wiest

"This is a book about self-sabotage. Why we do it, when we do it, and how to stop doing it-for good. Coexisting but conflicting needs create self-sabotaging behaviors. This is why we resist efforts to change, often until they feel completely futile. But by extracting crucial insight from our most damaging habits, building emotional intelligence by better understanding our brains and bodies, releasing past experiences at a cellular level, and learning to act as our highest potential future selves, we can step out of our own way and into our potential. For centuries, the mountain has been used as a metaphor for the big challenges we face, especially ones that seem impossible to overcome. To scale our mountains, we actually have to do the deep internal work of excavating trauma, building resilience, and adjusting how we show up for the climb. In the end, it is not the mountain we master, but ourselves."-- Provided by publisherRead more…

I Who Have Never Known Men
Jacqueline Harman, Ros Schwartz (Translation), Sophie Mackintosh (Afterword)

WITH A NEW INTRODUCTION BY SOPHIE MACKINTOSH, MAN BOOKER PRIZE-LONGLISTED AUTHOR OF THE WATER CURE “It is surprising that a book with the psychological detail of a nightmare elicits in the reader feelings of such profound intensity.” — Le Monde“The delirium of I Who Have Never Known Men suggests the work of a feminine Kafka.”—Le Nouvel Observateur 'For a very long time, the days went by, each just like the day before, then I began to think, & everything changed'Deep underground, 39 women live imprisoned in a cage. Watched over by guards, the women have no memory of how they got there, no notion of time, & only vague recollection of their lives before.As the burn of electric light merges day into night & numberless years pass, a young girl - the fortieth prisoner - sits alone & outcast in the corner. Soon she will show herself to be the key to the others' escape & survival in the strange world that awaits them above ground.°°° Jacqueline Harpman was born in Etterbeek, Belgium, in 1929, & fled to Casablanca with her family during WWII. Lights Out: A Dark Stalker Rom-Com
Navessa Allen

“I don’t need another kink.”That thought pops into my head whenever I pull up my favorite social media app, but alas, every time I scroll, I learn something new about myself, and another one is born. And yes, I know I’m responsible for what the algorithm shows me, but I’m trying to ignore that fact.Lately, my feed has been dominated by masked men. I’ve favorited videos with them dressed in full cosplay, decked out in futuristic military apparel, and wrapped up like ghouls.But more than anything else, my FYP is filled with shirtless men wearing ghost masks. Bonus points if they’re heavily tattooed, wielding a knife, or covered in fake blood. At night, I dream about being chased by them, of them catching me and doing deliciously dark things to my more than willing body.I never could have guessed that by sending one drunken text, those dreams would become my new reality.Read more…

Man's Search for Meaning
Viktor Emil Frankl

A book for finding purpose and strength in times of great despair, the international best-seller is still just as relevant today as when it was first published. “This is a book I reread a lot . . . it gives me hope . . . it gives me a sense of strength.” — Anderson Cooper, Anderson Cooper 360/CNN This seminal book, which has been called “one of the outstanding contributions to psychological thought” by Carl Rogers and “one of the great books of our time” by Harold Kushner, has been translated into more than fifty languages and sold over sixteen million copies. “An enduring work of survival literature,” according to the New York Times, Viktor Frankl’s riveting account of his time in the Nazi concentration camps, and his insightful exploration of the human will to find meaning in spite of the worst adversity, has offered solace and guidance to generations of readers since it was first published in 1946. At the heart of Frankl’s theory of logotherapy (from the Greek word for “meaning”) is a conviction that the primary human drive is not pleasure, as Freud maintained, but rather the discovery and pursuit of what the individual finds meaningful. Today, as new generations face new challenges and an ever more complex and uncertain world, Frankl’s classic work continues to inspire us all to find significance in the very act of living, in spite of all obstacles.Read more…

Project AngelBook – Volume X – Parts 1–36

This volume is not made up of my own words.There is no original commentary
here, no narrative, no analysis.This is simply me copying and pasting large chunks of text from my bookmarks—pages that were easy to extract, with no hyperlinks or formatting issues, saved from open tabs and archived corners of the web.
It's messy. It's unfiltered. It's chaotic.But it's valuable.
Each piece inside this volume was bookmarked for a reason.Not always because I agreed with it, but because it felt like a fragment of something larger—an insight, a worldview, a download.This is source material, plain and raw.
Fragmenta Ex Machina isn't about authorship.It's about preservation and system-building.It's about feeding the machine—laying bricks for the Operating System I'm constructing across these books.This is the raw intake phase. The memory dump. The zero layer.
Later volumes will be cleaner, more refined, more structured.But this? This is the foundation. The ether stream, bound and frozen before it vanished.
So if you're looking for polished prose, skip this one.But if you're here to explore the roots of something much bigger, this is where the signal begins.
Welcome to the fragments.
